Two Parleys Today Hold Fate of Rail, Auto Trades

Johnson to Meet With Motor Leaders to Urge Peace.

Carriers to Answer Labor's Pay Stand

New Warning on Strikes Sounded; White House Waits Anxiously.

The most serious threat to the Administration's recovery program since President Roosevelt took office loomed last night in two major industries.

While Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson sits in at a conference of automobile executives in New York this morning, alert to avert, if possible, a threatened strike in that industry, railroad managers meeting here will give their answer to the flat refusal of labor unions to agree to a six-month extension of the existing 10 per cent pay cut.

The decision today of the executive committee of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce regarding company unions—with Gen. Johnson present to urge an NRA compromise proposal upon the manufacturers—will determine whether 100,000 workers in Michigan will walk out Wednesday.

White House Is Anxious.

Meanwhile, at least another 100,000 workers on the Nation's railroads will be affected by the results of this morning's conference of managers and labor representatives at the Willard Hotel.

The White House is known to be watching both situations closely, and something of the Administration's anxiety is reflected in a statement to the Associated Press last night from Edward A. Filene, chairman of the New England district recovery board, that a strike now would "seriously injure the morale of the whole Nation."

Crises in the two industries confronted the President as he prepared to ask Congress to authorize Federal loans to industry through a chain of intermediate credit banks. He is expected to send to Capitol Hill today a strongly recommended bill which would establish an intermediate bank in each of the 12 Federal Reserve districts to lend industries funds to finance higher wages and shorter hours, under the recovery program.

Strike Plans Prepared.

The possibility of a strike in the automobile industry appeared last night as far from remote, with more than 10,000 workers in Detroit discussing their grievances at mass meetings, promising to walk out Wednesday unless the manufacturers consent to labor's interpretation of the NRA automotive code.

Youth Is Killed In Auto Crash

Pinecrest, Va., Driver Is Victim of Leesburg Road Accident.

One man was killed and another injured slightly in an automobile collision yesterday afternoon on the Washington-Leesburg road, 6 miles east of Leesburg.

Dewey Mock, 19, of Pinecrest, Va., was killed when his car crashed into a machine driven by Lee Franklin, of Waxpool, Va. Mock was pinned beneath the wreckage and, upon the arrival of the Loudoun County coroner, was pronounced dead.

A Sterling, Va., man named Robey, an occupant of Mock's car, was treated at Loudoun County Hospital for lacerations and released. Neither Franklin nor Millard Downs, of Sterling, Va., a third occupant of the car driven by Mock, was injured.

Sheriff E. S. Adrian of Loudoun County said:

$250 Not Enough Loot; Bandit Steals 40 Cents From Tot

Chicago, March 18 (U.P.).—A new candidate for the title of "meanest thief" appeared today in the form of a bandit who stole 40 cents from Albert Vischulis. Albert is the 4-year-old son of Mrs. Lucille Vischulis, who operates a beauty parlor.

Two bandits entered the parlor, took $250 from the owner and customers and were leaving when one of them noticed Albert.

"What's that in your hand?" the bandit demanded.

Albert didn't answer so the bandit forced the child to open his hand, discovered he was holding 40 cents, and took it.

Soviet Rescue Party Speeds To 89 on Ice

Relief Sent by Land, Air and Sea to Marooned Expedition.

Moscow, March 18 (A.P.).—By land and sea today the Soviet government's operations gained new momentum for the rescue of 89 members of an expedition stranded on an ice floe in the Bering Sea with less than a month's supply of food and fuel.

The government rescue commission here announced two specially equipped airplanes, piloted by the aviators Galyshev and Doronin, flew yesterday from Khabarovsk to Nikolayevsk, Siberia, despite a snowstorm, on the first stage of a flight to Cape Wellen, which will be the base for rescue flights.

Members of the Cape Wrangel party were marooned February 13 when their vessel, the Chelluskin, sank. Twelve women and children of the group were removed March 5 by the flier Liapidevsky, missing for days now following a second rescue hop.

The aviator, Vodopianov, who was to have accompanied Galyshev and Doronin in a third plane, was forced back to Khabarovsk by bad weather, but was expected to take off again today.

Seven light airplanes have been unloaded from a steamer at Olutorsk Bay and will take off for Cape Wellen via Providence Bay Tuesday.

Meanwhile a dog team base has been established at Cape Onman and the icebreaker Krassin is scheduled to sail soon from Leningrad to aid in the rescue efforts.

The government commission revealed it has sent two small semi-rigid dirigibles to Vladivostok by rail to be used in the relief operations if other means fail.

Radio advices from the North Cape said a blizzard was raging in the whole region. Radio communication with the marooned men was interrupted yesterday.

Georgetown Feels Quake 5,300 Miles From D. C.

Georgetown Observatory reported yesterday its seismological instruments registered a sharp earthquake of "deep focus type" about 5,300 miles southwest of Washington.

It began at 11:45 p. m. Saturday, reaching its maximum intensity at 11:55 p. m. and ending about 12:40 a. m. Sunday, according to the Associated Press.

Cold Wave Predicted.

New York, March 18 (A.P.).—A 22-degree drop in temperature within one hour was recorded by the Weather Bureau today. From a sunny high of 69 at 4 p. m., it dived to a cloudy 47 at 5. The forecast called for a cold wave.

$25,000 Race At Agua Won By Gallant Sir

Riskulus, Stablemate, 2d; 10,000 See Feature; Victor Pays $2.80.

Agua Caliente, Mexico, March 18 (A.P.).—For the first time in the history of the border classic, Gallant Sir became a two-time winner of the $25,000 Agua Caliente Handicap, finishing in front of his stablemate, Riskulus, by a head, here today before a crowd of 10,000 spectators.

The winner's time was 2:02 4-5. Pari-Mutuel, quoted at 3 to 1, to the mutuels at post time, was third. He was beaten by 5 lengths.

Gallant Sir and Riskulus, as the Norman W. Church entry, had gone to the barrier at the prohibitive odds of 2 to 5. Neither Jockey Jack Pollard, on the winner, nor Less Humphries, who brought Riskulus in a close second, laid a hand on his mount, as they came in far ahead of the other five starters.

Gallant Sir paid $2.80 to win.

Pays More for Place.

The son of Sir Galahad paid $3.20 to place, and the same amount to show, more than straight tickets paid. Riskulus paid the same place and show price and Pari-mutuel paid $3.20 to show.

Those who had accepted the short odds on Gallant Sir had a few uneasy moments as the horses paraded past the grand stand and clubhouse, Gallant Sir displayed a balky disposition and required a great deal of encouragement before he could be persuaded to take his place at the barrier.

Riskulus broke fast, moving into second place from the start with Gallant Sir fourth. Bonnie Grafton, young Meadowbrook Stable filly, which had the pole, was off in front. At the quarter mark, Riskulus moved up into the lead with Gallant Sir in second position, a length behind.

They raced past the half way mark, in the mile and one quarter

Pontiff to Canonize Three Saints Today

Vatican City, March 18 (A.P.).—The climax of holy year ceremonies for hundreds of American pilgrims will come tomorrow when Pope Pius presides at ceremonies for the joint canonization of two saints dear to American Catholics and one who is better known in Italy.

The three to be elevated to saintlhood are Teresa Marcherita Redi, before her death a Carmelite nun, of Florence; Father Pompilio Maria Pirrotti, one time confessor to the Scolopii Institute, and Father Giuseppe Benedetto Cottolengo, founder of the Institute of the Divine Providence of Turin.

5 Hearts! Grand Slam! Double! Finesse It! Can This Be Art?

New York, March 18 (A.P.).—All the pleasant social life of small towns and cities of the United States has been snuffed out by a craze for contract bridge, Octavus Roy Cohen, the author, declared today.

Cohen said he spoke as one who plays a pretty good game of contract and likes it very much. "But I resent having to play it," he added.

"The craze for contract," he asserted, "has done away with the art of conversation. I know very few couples who can enjoy any more what we used to call 'a pleasant social evening.' You can't have any social contact in a small city unless you are a pretty good bridge player.

"There are women who play bridge five afternoons and five nights a week. Even the old reliable culture clubs are taking it right on the chin.

"Even when men go on a fishing trip now, it means two hours of fishing and ten of bridge. I've taken three West Indies cruises now, and even on the boats you have a hard time making people do anything else but play bridge."

Cohen wanted it emphasized that as a bridge player himself, he isn't starting any crusade against bridge.

"But I think it's a shame that a nation should go drunk on what is really a darned good amusement.

"And I think a large percentage of those who play bridge inveterately have long since ceased to enjoy it. It has become an anesthetic against the dragging of time in the lives of average human beings."

Duce Plans Great Italy In 60 Years

Supreme Power in Next Century, His Plea, to Justify Arms.

Rome, March 18 (A.P.).—A 60-year program of internal and external expansion which in the twenty-first century will give Italy the "primacy of the world" was outlined today by Premier Benito Mussolini in a speech of 5,000 cheering chief Fascists of the kingdom.

That century, he said, will be a "blackshirt era."

The dictator spoke in the Rome Opera House to the so-called Quinquennial Assembly of the regime one week before the five-year election.

In the audience were virtually all of Italy's noted men, including Guglielmo Marconi, the inventor, the cabinet, provincial prefects and other officials.

"In this age of plans," Il Duce declared, "I want to lay before you a plan not for 5 years or 10 years, but for 60 years, carrying on to the twenty-first century, at which time Italy will have the primacy of the world.

Future in Asia, Africa.

"Italy has no future in the West and North. Her future lies to the East and South in Asia and Africa. The vast resources of Africa must be valorized and Africa brought within the civilized circle.

"I do not refer to conquest of territory, but to natural expansion. We demand that nations which already have arrived in Africa do not block at every step Italian expansion."

Here, it was said, he was referring particularly to France.

Internally, Mussolini said, immediate objectives were completion of swamp reclamation by 1940, new aqueducts and highways, plans to recreate Italian municipalities, complete rebuilding of 500,000 rural houses and repairs to 930,000 rural houses, a work of 30 years.

"Every rural person will have a clean and healthy house," he asserted. "Only in this way can the rush to the city be combatted."

"But in this phenomenom," he continued, "it is necessary to distinguish positive from negative Fascism. Positive Fascism knows how to destroy the old and rebuild the new, whereas negative Fascism knows only how to destroy."

Policy of Friendship.

Persons near to Il Duce said they did not know to what nation he referred, although some mentioned Germany.

In reference to foreign policy, Mussolini said:

"Italy has held a policy of friendship with Austria ever since the war and will continue to do so Austria knows we can be dependéd upon to defend her independence and we will do all we can to help her economically.

"Italy, Austria and Hungary yesterday signed political and commercial treaties.

"Our relations with Yugoslavia," he said, "are diplomatically correct but nothing more. Yet the nations should be friendly, because they are complementary to each other.

"Relations with France," he continued, "are better from a general viewpoint. But reality demands I state that none of the problems which have existed between us for 15 years has been solved.

"Between Hungary and Italy there is comprehension and solid-

James Ferguson Boomed To Succeed Jed Adams

Houston, Tex., March 18 (A.P.).—James E. Ferguson, former Governor and husband of the incumbent Governor, Mrs. Miram A. Ferguson, was mentioned today in Democratic circles as an outstanding candidate for National committeeman from Texas.

The Democratic State executive committee will meet here Saturday to nominate a successor to Jed C. Adams, of Dallas, who resigned when he was appointed to the Federal Board of Tax Appeals.

Famed 'Old Heidelberg' Author Dies, Aged 72

Berlin, March 18 (A.P.).—Wilhelm Meyer-Foerster, author of one of the world's greatest stage hits, "Alt Heidelberg," known to America as "The Student Prince," died today after a long illness. He was 72.

The play has been translated into every modern language, and at present is being produced in Tokyo in Japanese, and in Johannesburg, Union of South Africa, in English.

U. S. Files Tax Liens Against Screen Trio

Los Angeles, March 18 (A.P.).—An income tax lien against Fifi D'Orsay for $453 additional taxes on the actress' earnings has been filed in the Federal District Court.

Clarence Brown, also of the films, was made defendant in a lien for $8,097 for 1931, while Ted Healy was named in two liens, one for $1,142 for 1927, and the other for $568 for 1931.

Insull Plans Long Cruise To Foil U. S.

Month "or More" at Sea May Lead Him to Persia.

Haven in Abyssinia Is Denied; Port Said Is Barred.

Athens, March 18 (A.P.).—A month-long cruise aboard a dingy Greek tramp vessel—Samuel Insull's own little kingdom on the high seas—was in prospect today for the former Chicago Opera patron and utilities magnate, who again has given everybody the slip.

One of Insull's counsel here said he planned to remain at sea, secure from American extradition, until April 20—"or perhaps longer."

The lawyer denied Insull was going to Abyssinia, little-known kingdom of Ethiopians in northern Africa. He also declined to give any further information because "my client's life might be endangered." He declined even to say what he meant by that.

Friend Known There.

There, it was known, the brother of Mrs. Couyoumjorlu, wife of a Bagdad merchant who aided in attending Insull during his illness in Athens, owns property.

The belief was general that the 74-year-old financier was headed for Abyssinia in his startling dash aboard the Maiotis Wednesday night, ony to be recalled, but his lawyer here said it probable the course would be changed on the second journey.

A dispatch from Port Said stated it was understood port authorities had received orders from the Egyptian government not to allow Insull to land.

Before sailing last night, the one-time utilities magnate wanted in Chicago on fraud charges, said he planned to go to Djibouti, French Somaliland, in the Gulf of Aden, and the entrance to Abyssinia.

Ship Well Stocked.

To do so would have to pass through Port Said.

The Maiotis is well stocked with provisions.

Until the vessel, which may be Insull's cramped home for weeks, clears Greek waters, it is under government orders to report its position periodically during the day.

An earlier message from the vessel, which turned back into Piraeus, Athens port, on government orders Friday, gave its position at 7 a. m. as off the Island of Kithnos.

It is not expected to get out of territorial waters before noon tomorrow. At its present slow speed the Maiotis probably would not reach Port Said, if that is her destination, before late Tuesday.

Laura Ingalls, in Chile, Prepares to Fly Andes

Santiago, Chile, March 18 (A.P.).—The American Airwoman Laura Ingalls arrived here at 4 p. m. today. She was welcomed by members of the Aero Club, who gave her a reception. She is on a solo tour of South America.

She said she would take off Monday or Tuesday, depending on the weather, and head across the Andes for Buenos Aires. She will be the first American woman to cross the Andes by air.

Long's Funeral Set In Kansas City Today

Kansas City, March 18 (A.P.).—Funeral services will be held tomorrow for Robert A. Long, 83, lumber magnate, who died here Thursday.

The services, to be held in the Long mansion, will be conducted by Dr. Raphael H. Miller, Washington, D. C.; Dr. George H. Combs and Dr. Harry L. Ice, both of Kansas City.

New York, March 18 (A.P.).—In 20 years, Postmaster General James A. Farley said today, he has found more honesty and truth-telling in the ranks of politicians than in any other profession.

"You have to tell the truth or they soon tag you if you don't," he told the Regis High School Alumni Association at breakfast.

He urged members of the association to consider making a career of politics, and told them the New York State Assembly was the greatest training ground in the world.

Those Who Voted Wrong on Veterans Listed; "Ax" Poised.

(Associated Press.)

With old-time regulars breaking away from the Administrotion in droves on veterans' legislation, Speaker Rainey has ordered a detailed check to show which House Democrats voted "wrong" on 21 different occasions.

Rainey and other leaders are unwilling to admit that they plan any action against the outstanding irregulars. They say that nothing tangible can be done.

"But we'll have the information showing how many men have voted against us and on what occasions," the Speaker said.

Many things could be done with the tabulation. If, for example, Postmaster General Farley, Democratic patronage dispenser, should telephone the Speaker, it would be a simple matter for Rainey to refer to the list and see what the record showed.

Navy Airplane Awards Made Without Bids

75% of Equipment Was Bought Contrary to Laws and Ruling.

(Associated Press.)

New evidence to show that the Navy has continued to buy airplanes through a method held illegal by its own Judge Advocate General was presented yesterday to Congressional investigators, who had known that such a situation existed in the Army, but they had no documentary proof of a similar condition in the Navy.

It was understood that decisions from the Navy Judge Advocate General questioning the Navy's procurement methods would figure prominently in a minority report which will be filed this week by Representative McFarlane (Democrat), Texas, a member of the House Naval subcommittee that has just completed a study of Navy airplane purchases.

The majority of the committee already has approved a report finding no fault with and recommending no change in the Navy's present procurement methods.

75 Per Cent Negotiated.

Around 75 per cent of the Navy's aircraft purchases, the Comptroller General has informed investigators, were made without competition, under provisions of the 1926 air defense act.

One section of this act—(Q)—permits the buying of equipment from one manufacturer without competition if that equipment can be obtained nowhere else.

Another section—(k)—is divided into two parts. The first permits

Rickenbacker May Amplify "Traitor" Defi

War-Time Ace to Be Trade Board Speaker Here Tomorrow.

What Col. Eddie Rickenbacker, famous war ace, intended to tell the Senate Postoffice committee when he was interrupted by Senator Kenneth D. McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, chairman of the committee, on the ground that he was making a political speech, will probably be revealed tomorrow night when he addresses the Washington Board of Trade at the Mayflower Hotel.

Col. Rickenbacker, who returned to Detroit after stalking out of the committee hearing Saturday, will fly to Washington tomorrow. This second trip, however, has not been promoted by the development before the Senate committee, as the aviator had accepted an invitation to address the board more than a week ago.

However, what he planned to tell the trade board when he first accepted the invitation is understood to have been elaborated upon to a great extent on the basis of what took place on the Hill. And when the more than 1,500 members gather tomorrow they expect to hear the rest of that speech the colonel started to make before the Postoffice committee hearing on air mail.

Col. Rickenbacker began his speech before the committee with the statement that "I believe I have earned my heritage to citizenship and I want, in fairness to the Chief Executive, to make a few remarks."

These remarks, as the aviator learned in the next few seconds, were extremely few. He had time to remark that President Roosevelt acted contrary to American principles because of the bad advice of a few, and added that the President should "purge his official family of

(Copyright, 1934, by United Press.)

Urray, Rosshire, Scotland, March 18 (U.P.).—Secluded in a lonely highland farmhouse, Helen Keller is teaching the woman who taught her to read, talk and play, opening to her a world of many dimensions.

It was Anne Sullivan Macy who took Miss Keller in hand when she was a blind, deaf and mute child. Mrs. Macy has been Miss Keller's companion constantly since then, and now that she is practically blind, Miss Keller is patiently teaching her to read Braille.

Their farm cottage is near the village of Muir-of-Ord, in the shadows of Rosshire's towering peaks Miss Keller and Mrs. Macy are living in one of the most remote and inaccessible spots in the British Isles

Their only neighbors in an area of 100 square miles are six families of deer hunters.

There are five rooms in the house. Miss Keller occupies herself with all manner of work, from housekeeping to writing. Her correspondence is voluminous. She is up at 7 a. m. and has a breakfast of porridge. Then she launches into her day's work, which would tax the energy of many stronger persons.

"Yes," Miss Keller wrote in answer to a question, "it is true. My teacher is now practically blind. I read to her every day, and I make notes for her in Braille.

"She knew Braille when she was at school, and when she taught me, but then Braille was written with many letters. She would punch them out for me on Braille tablets. But since then the system has undergone a great change About half the letters are different, but it has not been difficult for me to teach Mrs. Macy the new letters.

Miss Keller is 53 and Mrs. Macy 67.

Administration Is Silent on Possible Return to Old Operators.

Air Corps Plans Eight 'Safe' Lines

'Un-American' Principle Scrapped at Session in White House.

President Roosevelt yesterday called a conference of Administration leaders at the White House to consider the acute situation arising from the air-mail crisis. It was definitely decided to modify the McKellar air-mail bill to meet the criticism of prominent fliers launched during the Senate hearings.

Inquiries as to whether it had been determined to restore recently canceled air-mail contracts to commercial companies evoked a complete and comprehensive silence.

Senator McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, chairman of the Postoffice Committee, attended the conference, which included Senator Robinson, Democratic leader; Senator Black, chairman of the committee which investigated the so-called air-mail frauds; Attorney General Cummings and Harllee Branch, Assistant Postmaster General. Each insisted that any word of what went on must come from the White House.

May Eliminate "Immunity."

It was learned, however, that the controversial section of the bill requiring aviation companies which had held any of the canceled contracts to waive all claims against the Government before rebidding will probably be eliminated.

It was this section of the bill which Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, Clarence Chamberlin and Col Eddie Rickenbacker challenged and most severely criticized.

"That paragraph," declared Col. Lindbergh during his testimony last week, "is the most unjust act I've ever seen written into American legislation."

If the Army succeeds this time in giving adequate service without further deaths, the Administration, it was indicated, will probably take its time about negotiating new contracts. But if Army air-mail crackups start again, it is assured, in some circles, that the mail will be returned to private hands, even if the contracts have to be let on unsatisfactory terms.

Meanwhile, with new determination and perfected equipment installed in all planes after a week's recess, the Army resumed flying the mail early today with planes on eight selected routes, all using lighter and "safer" equipment.

Planes All Reequipped.

After being grounded following President Roosevelt's order that every precaution be taken to stop mounting deaths in the Air Corps, planes flying the air mail, carrying out the "safety-first policy" of Maj. Gen. B. D. Foulois, chief of the Air Corps, are now equipped with two-way radio and blind and night flying equipment.

The first plane was scheduled to

Capital Woman Killed by Auto

Mrs. Mary Bladen Ran in Front of His Machine, Driver Declares.

Mrs. Mary Bladen, 60, was killed instantly early last night while on her way to church when she ran across Georgia avenue near Ingraham street directly into the path of a southbound automobile.

A few minutes after Mrs. Bladen left her home at 5226 Illinois avenue northwest to attend evening services at the Pentacostal Holiness Church, North Capitol and H streets northwest, she died in her haste to catch a street car.

According to Conrad Hoffman, 60, driver of the automobile that struck Mrs. Bladen, she ran diagonally across the street in front of his machine. He first saw her when she reached the middle of the street a few feet away, but his efforts to attract her attention were fruitless.

Rea Says U.S. Policy in China Church-Ruled

Manchukuo Worker Assails Protestant Mission Influence.

By Kendall Foss.

American policy toward China was dictated for many years by the Evangelical missionary boards, declared George Bronson Rea, counselor to the ministry of foreign affairs of the unrecognized state of Manchukuo, in a recent address before students of Georgetown University.

No Jew, no Unitarian, no Catholic need apply for the position of American Minister to China, Rea also charged.

The speech was made under the auspices of the university's foreign service school, in pursuance of its policy of providing an impartial forum for the informal discussion of international problems affecting public interest.

In a covering letter attached to copies of the speech, Father Edmund A. Walsh, regent of the school, disclaimed responsibility for the general argument or any specific statement, but assumed responsibility for bringing the address to the attention of the student body and the press.

Hornbeck Is Reticent.

"If true, Mr. Rea's arguments may well prove to be a contribution to the peace of the world. If inaccurate in statement or false in conclusion, it should be answered immediately," Father Walsh's letter said.

"I do not choose to comment," replied Stanley Hornbeck, chief of the State Department's division of Far Eastern Affairs, when questioned about the speech. Other quarters intimated the department might have something to say on the matter later.

Inasmuch as the speech is directed against the State Department's Far Eastern policy, it is believed the phrase "if inaccurate * * * it should be answered immediately" in Father Walsh's letter is pointed toward the department.

Observers, however, concede it is no part of the department's official duty to engage in controversy with representatives of unrecognized states. Rea is an American citizen, resident many years in China, now living in Washington in the employ of the government of the Japanese-created state of Manchukuo.

The foreign service school is engaged in training young men to take Government examinations for posts in the Foreign Service, diplomatic and commercial.

Two outstanding new points appear in this particular presentation of Rea's argument for a reversal of the Stimson doctrine, the doctrine which refuses to recognize Manchukuo on the ground that the creation of the state is a violation of the Nine-Power Treaty, guaranteeing the territorial integrity of China.

One point is that American intervention in Siberia in 1918-19 "made Asia safe for Communism." The other is that this country's policy toward China was long dictated by the Evangelical Missionary Boards.

Declaring that Jews, Unitarians and Catholics need not apply for the Chinese post, Rea cited two cases during Wilson administration to prove the first two categories.

Cites Morgenthau Case.

Citing Henry Morgenthau, sr.'s book "All in a Lifetime," Rea tells how Morgenthau demurred at the offer of the ambassadorship to Turkey in 1913, saying he would prefer Peking, even if it was only a ministership.

Wilson, Rea told his hearers, retorted angrily that he had selected Morgenthau for Turkey because the only interest the American people had in that country was the Zionist movement in Palestine. He wanted a Jew at Constantinople, whereas our chief interests in China were largely missionary and called for a Christian, preferably a man of the Evangelical type, Rea said Wilson had added.

Then, when the post at Peking was offered to Dr. Charles Eliot, former president of Harvard, Secretary of State Bryan was much distressed because Eliot was a Unitarian and did not believe in the divinity of Christ, Rea said, referring to the "Intimate Papers of Colonel House" for authority.

Rea then cited House's difficulties in finding a suitable man, recalling passages describing the colonel's efforts to ascertain the religious attitude of candidates for the post.

"It only remained for a Catholic to apply for the job to complete the picture," Rea added. He did not offer a case in point, but went on to charge no one had a chance without the indorsement of the mission boards.

Pursuing his attack on the Protestant churches, Rea said:

"The best interests of our missionaries demanded we do nothing to arouse the hostility of the Chinese against the United States. The missionaries present only the bright side of the Chinese picture to the people of this country and oppose the merchants who clamor for armed protection when their lives and properties are imperiled by Chinese armies, bandits, pirates or antiforeign mobs."

Cites 1927 Crisis.

Rea declared that in 1927 at the height of the Nationalist movement, when Shanghai was menaced by Communist armies, the mission boards prevailed upon this Government not to join Britain and France in intervening for fear such action might incur the ill will of the Nationalists. He said this was an instance when the Evangelical churches influenced Washington to support their specific interests.

The rest of the long speech is a recasting of points repeatedly made by Rea since entering the service of Manchukuo. Fundamentally he maintains the Stimson doctrine is a mistake and must lead to conflict with Japan. Saying he speaks as an American to fellow Americans, he urges abandonment of the doctrine and a policy of friendly cooperation with Tokyo in the development of the independent empire of Manchutikuo, to give the state its new imperial name.

Significantly absent was any reference to relations with Germany, which have cooled over the question of Austrian independence.

Referring to the political protocol signed yesterday with Austria and Hungary, he said "this does not exclude other nations. Let us now leave zone words and enter zone deeds.

"Reform of the League of Nations (demanded by Mussolini) has been almost universally accepted," he asserted, "and will be made when disarmament is settled.

No Disarmament Seen.

"Heavily armed states will not disarm. An Italian memorandum states the problem in all of its reality. If nations will not disarm they can not logically oppose the parity of arms required by Germany. They can not pretend to disarm people like the Garmans.

"Europe has need of mutual comprehension or it is heading for its twilight."

In view of the general situation Italy could not reduce its military expenditure, the dictator said, and Italy, to carry out its internal program, must be strong. She will not attack, he said, but will be "ready for any eventuality."

Security also will be dependent on the birth rate.

"Venality means death to any nation," he said.

Spanish Trade Accord Sought With America

(Copyright, 1934, by Associated Press.)

Madrid, March 18.—The present barriers against American exports to Spain could be removed by a bilateral accord, settling long-standing differences between the two countries, Spanish and American commercial officials said today.

Spanish exporters complain that their leading products, such as manufactured cork, olives, olive oil and onions are kept out of the United States by prohibitive tariffs and that Almeria grapes are excluded by "unfair regulations of the Department of Agriculture."

American business people here are displeased because Spain has granted preferential customs rates to certain European countries on important imports, including automobiles, motion pictures, artificial silk and cured meats, the rates running from 50 to 100 per cent below the rates on American products.

The new "contingent" system has complicated matters further because it is based on the theory that Spain should buy from countries which buy from Spain. The schedule to be worked out will affect American exports to Spain because this country has a two-to-one unfavorable trade balance with the United States.

Despite this system, Spanish officials say they are anxious to negotiate an agreement with the United States on disputed matters and arrange a new commercial pact.

A reduction in American duties would bring a corresponding decrease in Spanish tariffs on major American products sold here, they declared.

Austrians Hail 3-Power Pact Pledging Safety

Press Says Treaty Sets Example for Europe to Follow.

Vienna, March 18 (AP).—The three-way Italo-Austro-Hungarian pact which Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss signed at Rome on behalf of his country found a warm welcome today in Austrian newspapers.

The Austrian press hailed the agreement as an example for other countries.

Three points were amplified in today's accounts:

1. The immediate practical benefit for Austria.
2. Retention of complete independence for all signers.
3. The fact that the pact is open to other signers.

The semiofficial Reichspost said the fate of the new order established by Premier Mussolini, Premier Goemboes of Hungary and Dollfuss "will depend very much on the question of the effect the agreement has on the most closely interested non-signers, the Little Entente and Germany."

It pointed to the friendly attitude of Czechoslovakia and the doubtful position of Yugoslavia and Rumania, and added that Germany has an opportunity to clear up the central European position without a loss of prestige.

It also declared Mussolini was "the first of all European statesmen to draw new consequences from old truths, but it is not enough to affirm Austrian independence. She must be given opportunity to live and do business with her own power."

The official Wiener Zeitung called the pact a milestone in European history.

"The negotiations at Rome," the paper said, "brought more than was expected, not only for Austria, Hungary and Italy but for all Europe. They represented the first great attempt at a positive struggle with the necessity of the times, an epochal fact that certainly will have the greatest effect on all the world."

The paper said the agreement "contains an invitation to all European states to work with Austria, Hungary and Italy in the spirit of the new pact for a complete rebuilding of Europe."

The Neue Freiepress amplified a provision of the pact for consultation between the three powers and access to the Adriatic Sea for Austria.

nouncement from the club said yesterday, "the club plans to advance a program of liberal policies, to criticize fearlessly but constructively, to meet the needs of the times with militant, forward-looking leadership. It will look at the country as a whole and consider measures from the viewpoint of the many, not of the few, and battle for the Nation in this period of reconstruction, not merely for a locality.

Backed by Elders.

"The new group, which has the hearty backing of veterans of the club, plans a series of conferences and a membership campaign, to make the club a center of Republican activities in the Nation, representing the voice and viewpoint of leaders and representatives of the party from every section of the country. It will make its influence felt in National, State and local affairs.

"Since his recent return to New York, Col. Roosevelt has been in close touch with public affairs and political leaders. His leadership in the club was immediately sought and his acceptance of the nomination for its president has already infused new strength and enthusiasm. Applications from new members have begun to come in.

"A membership campaign will be launched with a view to increasing the enrollment of both resident and nonresident members, and especially attracting nonresident members from all parts of the country to take an active part in the affairs of the club.

Will Check Up on Nation.

"Systematic efforts will be made to gather authoritative information on public administration in city, State and Nation, through research, strong committees with forward-looking policies in each of these fields, and through weekly round table conference in addition to State meetings and other conferences."

For president, Col. Theodore Roosevelt; first vice president, William J. Donovan; second vice president, F. Trubee Davison; third vice president, Roger W. Straus; recording secretary, George A. Hastings; corresponding secretary, Loran T. Hostetler, and treasurer, Charles E. Heydt.

"HOLLYWOOD BABIES." Hirst-Lake production in two acts, featuring Lucky Darlin, Rita Zane and Sammy Weston, with Trilby Kosla, Ina Thomas, Nora Murray, Karl Bowers, Billy Ainsley, Lew Petel, Jimmy Byrnes and Harry Allen. Staged under the direction of Frankie Bryant. Reviewed Sunday matinee by W. A. Whitney.

No less glamorous than its expressive title, "Hollywood Babies" proves beyond doubt that Col. Jimmy Lake can dish it out, not only in the way that his patrons like it, but in a manner to make them cry for more.

Less star-studded than usual, the bill is the more consistently entertaining on that account, relying on the general appeal of every number rather than occasional moments of dazzling grandeur.

It matters not where one looks this week, there is charm and delight—good singing, cleverly routined dances, appealing specialty numbers, fast comedy by good comedians, abetted by fine straights and, above all, colorful and brilliant staging.

Outstanding is Lucky Darlin, one of Washington's strongest weaknesses. Her terpsichorean achievements, as the prima ballerina, are revealing and stamp her the ace lady of the current company.

But Lucky is just one of the attractions. Rita Zane, the titian charmer, and Ina Thomas, the devastating platinum blonde, are there to add zest to the program. Trilby Kosla, through some emergency, was raised for the week from the line to the rank of principal, starting off the array of talent in a way that made those subsequently appearing do their best to run even.

Topping the roster of comedians is Sammy Weston, who is making his first appearance in the East, following a successful tour of duty on the West Coast. His piece de resistance is a revival of Ben Welsh's famed "The Cobbler" skit (which Joe Welsh, a brother, inaugurated o nthe vaude stage). It is a great act that packs a k. o. wollop.

Karl Bowers and Billy Ainsley, the latter also coming from the West Coast, are the other comics who contribute more than a few of the excellent reasons for the emission of hearty guffaws. Lew Petel, with the doubling of Mr. Allen, who is the male warbler for the week, handles the straight roles.

Norma Murray trills a sweet soprano of the better sort, and Jimmy Byrnes does a couple of tap numbers that are by no means enough.

Special mention should be made of the extraordinarily capable chorus this week. An innovation in finales is introduced with a tabloid minstrel show closing the first act.

Dillinger's Aid Fights Noose; Lawyer Jailed

Russell Clark, Third of Gang to Face Trial in Sheriff Slaying.

Lima Ohio, March 18 (AP).—As the third of oJhn Dillinger's pals, Russell Clark, prepared for trial tomorrow on first degree murder charges, the notorious fugitive's lawyer, Louis P. Piquett, of Chicago, occupied a cell in this city's jail, and his nemesis, Capt. Matt Leach, of the Indiana State police, also was a visitor here.

Piquett, arrested for investigation late last night after he had boasted of his connections with Dillinger in a hotel lobby here, is held for investigation, City Prosecutor John Creps said. The attorney, former city prosecutor of Chicago, was taken into custody by men working for Brig. Gen. Harold M. Bush, National Guard commander here.

Prosecutor Creps said Piquett probably will charged with disorderly conduct and arariqned tomorrow, when Clark's trial on the charge of slaying Sheriff Jess L. Sarber October 12 in a raid on the Allen County Jail to free Dillinger, will start.

Two other Dillinger aids, Harry Pierpont and Edward Makley, have been convicted in the slaying.

Piquett was picked up on the street here with a woman. He boasted of being Dillinger's attorney an Crown Point and said that Dillinger had told him he would escape from Crown Point with a wooden gun.

Piquett was sent for by Dillinger soon after the gangster's return from Tucson, Ariz., to the Crown Point, Ind. Jail. He took a woman who represente dherself as Dillinger's wife into the Crown Point jail where the twyo had a conference "in code."

The State contends Clark was one of the men who engineered the jail break to free Dillinger, and that he was one of the two men who remained on guard outside the jail as three others entered and shot the sheriff.

Japanese Revision Of Trade Measures Held Prosperity Aid

New York, March 18 (AP).—Renzo Sawada, Japanese consul general, today described his nation's new commercial policy as "an important contribution to the cause of world prosperity" in a statement explaining new commercial bills pending in the diet.

"The pending bills are designed to accelerate economic cooperation with foreign countries," he said, "by reciprocating measures taken abroad in favor of Japanese goods. On the other hand there is provision for effective measures to cope with unreasonably oppressive restrictions against Japanese goods."

Broad powers would be given the government, he explained, in the bill "for adjustment and protection of foreign trade," including the right to imoose import duties of 100 per cent ad valorem, in addition to levies provided in the customs tariff law; to reduce or remove import duties, and to prohibit or restrict both importation and exportation.

Navy Asks Millions for Ocean Of Its Own to Sail Toy Boats

Wants One That'll Be Calm or Stormy Just When Admiral Says So.

(United Press.)

Despite the fact that three-quarters of the earth's surface is covered with water and we have three dandy oceans, the United States Navy still feels land-locked and wants to build another ocean right over there in Maryland.

Lest the citizens of Maryland become terrified and take to lifeboats immediately, let us hasten to say that the Navy is not contemplating anything on a Pacific, Atlantic or Indian Ocean scale. It does not propose to shovel the United States into the sea and leave Canada and Mexico dangling. All it wants is a private, clubby little ocean that will make the doctrine of the freedom of the seas just another scrap of paper.

Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, chief of the Naval Construction Corps, has informed the House Appropriations Committee that unless it gives him $3,400,000 to build a rock-foundation ocean at Cabin John, Md., it will be a "National disgrace."

For Toy Ships.

Asked what he wanted to do with this ocean, he replied, logically enough, that he wanted to sail ships on it. Not big ships, mind you: toy ships.

Now, don't jump at the conclusion that the Navy is getting childish and demanding that Congress give it toy battleships, building blocks and wooden sailors. Not at all. It wants to bui.. little battleships and sail them on this proposed lilliputain ocean to find out how big battleships will work. Sometimes the building of a little battleship, which sinks, saves the trouble and money of building a big battleship.

Why, right now the Navy has a private ocean over at the Washington Navy Yard, but Admiral Land (by the way, what's a sailor doing with a name like that, Secretary Swanson?) says it's a bum ocean. A 1900 model ocean, in fact, whose tides are beginning to creak with old age. The admiral says you can't get much of an idea with a toy battleship on a 1900 ocean.

You See, It's This Way.

But on this new ocean, which would be about 690 feet long, 50 feet wide and 22 feet deep, toy battleships can be operated at 30 knots, midget seaplanes can land and submarines about the size of a banana can prowl around. Maybe you want to know why the Navy doesn't use a bathtub or the Potomac and save the $3,400,000. We'll tell you why.

Admiral Land might want a storm and the Potomac would be all quiet, as McClellan used to tell Lincoln. The Navy hasn't got time to sit around and wait for the Potomac to get rough. On his proposed ocean, the admiral could kick up a nor'easter any time he felt like it, and then play King Canute, commanding the waves to stand still.

We intend to ask the admiral if he could install a medium-sized sea serpent. All oceans seem to have them these days.

Wireless Phone Pierces Fathoms, Aids Sea Divers

San Francisco, March 18 (AP).—Placing of an obscure bolt atop a huge caisson, or the movements of divers on the floor of the bay—minor details in construction of the gigantic San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge—are being directed by short-wave wireless telephone without the chief engineer's leaving his downtown office.

Speaking into an ordinary telephone transmitter, Chief Engineer C. H. Purcell confers with divers 235 feet below the bay's surface through questions relayed by workers on the world's largest compressed air flotation caisson 2 miles from shore.

The bridge within four years is scheduled to link San Francisco and Oakland with a band of concrete and steel 8½ miles long, of which more than 5 miles are over water.

Not only are the fixed points of construction in immediate touch with the strategic shore points, but tugs towing barges of materials and supplies also carry telephone sets and may be redirected in their destination long after leaving their loading point.

Dillinger Hunt Still Fruitless

Police Army Continues Search in Michigan, Finds No Clews.

Port Huron, Mich., March 18 (AP). Eastern Michigan officers continued today to trace numerous tips and clews, all fruitless, in their search for John Dillinger, Indiana desperado.

Road patrols remained active, stopping all motorists in the area after a gun fight in which one officer and the colored prisoner who escaped from the Lake County, Ind., Jail with the fugitive were wounded fatally.

Herbert Youngblood was wounded Friday morning and died a few hours later, but not until he had told officers that Dillinger had been with him in South Port Huron the preceding night. This contradicted his statement to a priest who sought to console him on his hospital deathbed.

Deputy Sheriff Howard Lohr, one of those wounded in the encounter with Youngblood in a South Port Huron store, was reported by hospital attendants today to be better. Undersheriff Charles Cavanaugh died from his wounds Friday night.

French Unrest Flares Anew

15,000 in Demonstration Against United States Turpentine Imports.

Paris, March 18 (AP).—American turpentine today caused a fresh outbreak of political unrest, lingering in France since the Paris riots of early February.

Fifteen thousand workers of southwestern France, parading behind red flags at Mont de Marsan, threatened "more drastic action" unless the government protected the French turpentine industry against United States competition.

Demonstrators, including many unemployed, assembled by train and motor bus to raise their voices against Parliament's action in cutting the industry's subsidy from $1,950,000 to $780,000.

Roubaix, France, March 18 (AP).—A fist fight between groups of Royalists and Socialists hawking partisan newspapers in front of a church here was broken up by police today. One was hurt and seven were arrested.

Toulon, France, March 18 (AP). Fighting over the city's water supply broke up a meeting of the Toulon Municipal Council today after three persons had been hurt seriously. The battle grew out of a loan of $1,620,000 voted by the council to a private waterworks company.

Last of the Old Windjammers Race Over Pacific for Record

Grain-Laden Craft Seeks New Mark in Dash Around Horn.

New York, March 18 (AP).—Somewhere in the "roaring forties" of the South Pacific Ocean, 18 of the last 21 windjammers left on the high seas are tearing along toward Cape Horn in the 1934 grain race.

"Interest this year," said Alan Villiers, young Australian sea writer, today, "is centered in the attempt the two German four-masted braques, Pridwall and Padau, will make to break the record we set up last year in my Parma."

The Parma, which Villiers has registered under the Finnish flag, came around the Horn in 1933 in 83 days, the fastest passage for a sailing ship in 80 years.

Villiers, who is proud of this swift passage of his vessel, admitted the challenge of the Germans makes him a little nervous.

"I don't think they can break our time, but you never can tell what will happen on the sea in a sailing ship. Luck has a lot to do with it."

This year, the race has mustered 2 Swedish, 2 German and 14 Finnish windjammers.

The grain race, which has been run every year since Australia began shipping wheat overseas, nearly a century ago, is the last regular trade left for the sailing ships. In the transportation of wheat, steamship speed is not important.

Filene Urges Peace in Auto Trade as Vital

Warns Strikes Would Be Dangerous Blow to Recovery.

Boston, March 18 (AP).—Edward A. Filene, prominent merchant and chairman of the New England District Recovery Board, today issued an appeal to the American Federation of Labor and the General Motors Corporation to come to an agreement and avoid a threatened strike.

"This strike must not happen," said Filene. "All America looks to the great American Federation of Labor and the great General Motors Corporation to prevent any such Nation-wide calamity, which would be not only a dangerous blow to the President's recovery program, but would seriously injure the morale of the Nation.

"Industrial statesmanship of the highest order is needed on both sides, for the situation is unprecedented and calls for a courageous breaking of precedents on the part of employer and employes' organizations.

Profitable Cooperation.

"I am hoping for someting much better than a compromise. I am hoping for a solution which will melt misunderstanding and result in practical and mutually profitable cooperation between the whole American labor movement and modern, progressive, American industry.

"Industrial statesmanship, I believe, can find such a solution. General Motrs is in the vanguard of the new capitalism in which the employer recognizes the business necessity for higher wages, shorter work-days and all the advantages to labor for which labor unionism stands.

"But General Motors, in common with much of 'big business,' is afraid that the American Federation of Labor is not so organized as to control its members within the bounds of justice and safety to business. Therefore it thinks itself justified in planning to substitute company-guided or company-controlled unions for American Federation of Labor unions.

Acceptable Program.

"I have good reason to believe that organized labor in this present crisis is ready to rise to its great opportunity. Not in a spirit of compromise concerning any fundamental principle, but in a spirit of adjustment to these great, new times, it will be able to discover and propose a program which will be not merely acceptable but highly advantageous to all concerned—which means, in this instance, to everybody. Can not General Motors and the American Federation of Labor at least agree that such a solution can be discovered in conference?

"Plain common sense and genuine patriotism would seem to dictate that a strike-war shall not occur until every effort has been exhausted to discover a way out."

Karel Kozeluh Scores; Stricken With Cramps

Palm Beach, Fla., March 18 (U.P.).—Fighting abdominal champs that caused him to collapse at the end of the match, Karel Kozeluh, veteran Czecho-Slovakian tennis professional, defeating Hans Nusslein, self-styled world's professional champion, in the finals of the Southern professional championships here today, 6—2, 6—8, 6—1, 4—6, 6—4.

Kozeluh, almost twice Nusslein's age, suffered from severe abdominal cramps in the final set and he collapsed on a bench at the end of the match. He had to be helped off the court. The Czecho-Slovakian, former world's champion, outsmarted Nusslein by drawing him out of position. His placements were uncannily accurate.

The match, lasting three hours, caused curtailment of the doubles finals to the best two out of three sets. In the doubles finals, Nusslein and Arthur Rudolph defeated Kozeluh and Dan Kenny, 7—5, 6—2.

N. Y. Postal Employes Rap Farley Furlough

New York, March 18 (AP).—Twenty-five hundred postal employes of the metropolitan area adopted a resolution today protesting the four-day furlough by July 1 ordered by Postmaster General Farley and asking immediate restoration of the 15 per cent pay cut.

Representative Boileau (Republican), Wisconsin, told the employes mass meeting that many Congressmen are afraid to oppose the Administration because they are hoping to get postoffice patronage.

Patman Movie Censor Bill Hit By Civil Union

Criminal Juries Are Held to Be Best Curb Upon Obscene Matter.

Declaring that "experience has shown that the best control of obscene matter lies in the hands of juries under criminal law," the National Council on Freedom, unit of the American Civil Liberties Union, is urging defeat of the Patman bill for creation of a Federal motion picture censorship commission.

A memorial will be presented this morning to Representative Sam Rayburn, chairman of the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Commission, at hearings on the proposed bill.

Denying any connection directly or indirectly with any private interest, the council declares that State motion picture censorship has not been extended since 1922 and cites the defeat that year in a referendum in Massachusetts of a proposal for censorship by 547,000 to 207,000. The council claims that a similar verdict would result anywhere in the country.

It is stated in the memorandum that "juries reflect public standards on morals far better than professional censors. Prosecutions are now sufficient control of obscene and indecent matter in print, paintings, or on the stage. Motion pictures should be no exception."

New Homestead Scheme Approved

Longview, Wash., Project Is Allotted $160,000.

Secretary Ickes announced yesterday that the Federal Subsistence Homestead Corporation had approved an allotment of $160,000 for a homestead project at Longview, Wash., according to the Associated Press.

Sixty homesteads will be included in the project, which will be under the supervision of M. L. Wilson, director of the Division of Subsistence Homesteads, Ickes said. The project is designed to demonstrate the value of such homesteads as a means of supplementing the income of employes of various industries at Longview, he added.

The Secretary said the homestead will be located within 3 miles of the Longview city center, with good roads to the city.

New Warning on Strikes Sounded; White House Waits Anxiously.

Motor Car Co.'s union in Detroit yesterday, telling them the dispute with the manufacturers does not center about a demand for better hours and wages so much as for strict enforcement of the code.

Mass meetings will be held in Detroit, Pontiac and Flint tonight, after word is received from New York regarding action by the manufacturers.

Organized labor has protested to the National Labor Board that its members are being discriminated against by companies in favor of their own unions, and that company officials refuse to deal with organized labor representatives.

Hits A. F. of L.

John N. Lovett, president of the Michigan Manufacturers Association, in a radio speech Saturday night, charged the A. F. of L. is using the automobile strike threat in an effort to force workers to join its ranks.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said the "cause of the strike is directly traceable to the attempts of automobile manufacturers to impose company unions upon their workers."

Before leaving for New York Saturday, Gen. Johnson is understood to have reported to the White House his hope that a settlement can be effected. While keeping in close touch with the manufacturers' conference, the Recovery Administrator has proposed to the workers the setting up of an impartial mediation committee for the industry.

Meanwhile, a conference committee of railroad managers, headed by W. F. Thiehoff, met yesterday at the Willard to consider the uncompromising rejection voiced by A. F. Whitney, chairman of the railway labor executive committee, to the President's proposal that the 10 per cent cut continue in effect until an adjustment can be reached.

Answer Decided Upon.

The operators' representatives were understood to have reached a definite decision on their reply to the unions, according to the Associated Press, but Thiehoff said the answer would not be made known until it is given the workers across the conference table this morning.

President Roosevelt several weeks ago asked the railroad workers and operators to extend their wage agreement for six months beyond the June 30 expiration date. The unions replied they could not and would not acquiesce.

The managers, notifying the workers in a formal statement, that "your action precipitates a serious situation," called attention of the unions to the "request which the President of the United States has made in the interest of National recovery."

Hitch Hiker Is Found Unconscious by Road

Newark, Ohio, March 18 (AP).—Frank Huppert, 22, of Pittsburgh, a hitch-hiker, lay near death in Zanesville Hospital tonight, the victim, authorities believe, of an attempt to rob him of $3.

The youth was found unconscious today beside a road, his skull crushed. He later told county deputies he was thrown from the car of a man who had offered him a ride from Terre Haute, Ind., to Wheeling.

Pensioned Horses Recalled.

North Adams, Mass. (U.P.).—Maggie and Maude, veteran fire horses pensioned to the city farm four years ago, were recalled for emergency duty when the recent severe blizzard crippled the city's motorized apparatus.

Boston Red Sox Win From Tigers

Rogell and Gehringer Slam Homers in 7-5 Game; Cochrane Idles.

SARASOTA, Fla., March 18 (AP).—The Detroit Tigers went down to a 7-to-5 defeat at the hands of the Boston Red Sox in their first practice game with a major league team today and the worst of it was the Sox were managed by the Tigers' old pilot, Bucky Harris.

Bill Rogell took the batting honors for the Tigers today, lifting a home run in the first inning and a triple in the seventh. Gehringer also got a homer in the third frame. Boston got in most of its heavy hitting against the offerings of Elon Hogsett, whom they pounded for six hits and four runs in the span of three innings.

Jack Knott, who started on the mound for St. Louis, was touched for three hits, all the House of David team garnered, in the first inning. He was followed by Baecht and Mills.

Lopez, Wilson Missing.

Orlando, Fla., March 18 (U.P.).—Catcher Al Lopez and Outfielder Hack Wilson were still missing tonight, when the Brooklyn Dodgers left their training camp here for a four-day road tour. Lopez apparently is determined to get close to the $15,000 he demanded early in his contract wrangle. He has been offered an increase of $2,200, which would bring his 1934 pay to $10,700. Nothing has been heard from Wilson since ten days ago when he notified manager Casey Stengel that he would be a few days late in reporting because of the illness of his son, Bobby.

West Virginia Resort Would Revive Fame

Berkeley Springs Will Ask Papers Aid Sufferers From Paralysis.

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., March 18 (Spl.).—Acting on the belief that the mineral water baths available here, which once drew patronage from a wide territory, contain healing qualities for the treatment of infantile paralysis sufferers comparable to those at Warm Springs, Ga., an effort is being made with the assistance of State road commission to attract public attention to facilities here.

As a result of a conference between A. McWilliams, of the State road department, and local residents here last week definite procedure to revive the popularity of the springs is forecast. Last year an unsuccessful effort was made to have the springs used by President Roosevelt. The hope then was to have a "Summer White House" located here, two hours by motor from Washington.

The plan is to arrange with one leading newspaper in a dozen nearby cities, including Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia and New York, to sponsor a child in each city suffering from infantile paralysis to be sent to Berkeley Springs for treatment. Expense of treatments here, not to exceed $1 per day per child would be borne by local organizations. The treatments would last three to six months.

McWilliams agreed to confer with editors and publishers on the plan.

The plan was discussed Friday afternoon at a meeting of church and fraternal organizations. Several have pledged treatment for one child including the American Legion, Junior Order and Chamber of Commerce. It is hoped the State will establish additional medical supervision here.

C. W. Klee Succeeds To Postmaster Job

Mrs. H. M. Kimmey Retires at Westminster.

Westminster, Md., March 18 (Spl.).—Charles W. Klee this week began his duties as postmaster in the largest city in Carroll County, succeeding Mrs. Harry M. Kimmey, who has been acting postmistress since her husband's death nearly two years ago.

With the assumption of duties by Klee, no less than four Republican postmasters in Carroll have been, or will shortly be succeeded by Democrats.

The Democratic State central committee for Carroll County has recommended the appointment of Jacob R. L. Wink for the office at Manchester and J. Wilmer Baker for a similar position at Union Bridge. Ralph Sellman, brother of the chairman of the county political leader, A. B. Sellman, will soon assume postmastership at Mount Airy.

Schools Called Basic Industry

Washingtonian Cites Big Pay Rolls in Address at Harrisonburg.

Harrisonburg, Va., March 18 (Spl.). Education is one of America's basic industries, Miss Charl Williams, of Washington, field secretary of the National Education Association, declared here last night at the first public meeting of the Harrisonburg Teachers Association.

She cited that in volume, personnel, capital outlay and production the education industry ranks among the first in the Nation. Its 1,000,000 employes, she pointed out, is exceeded only by agriculture, construction, railroads and textiles.

From the production standpoint, she pointed out that there are 28,000,000 boys and girls in public schools, a million in colleges and a million in evening classes.

Miss Williams asserted that education should be considered along with other industries in putting people back to work and more money in circulation. She criticized the curtailment of school terms and decreases in salaries of teachers. She decried nonpayment of teachers, asserting that 40,000 have $40,000,000 in back payments coming to them.

Experts to Speak At Medical Meeting

Norfolk District Dispute Faced By Democrats

To Decide Whether to Pick Nominees by Primary or Convention.

Norfolk, Va., March 18 (Spl.). Whether a Democratic candidate for Congress shall be chosen by convention or a primary will be determined by the second district Democratic committee at a meeting here next week.

Colgate W. Darden, jr., incumbent from this district, favors a primary. He is a candidate to succeed himself. No one has announced to oppose Representative Darden. United States Senator Byrd also will be a candidate for the nomination for reelection, and is unopposed to date. It is understood overtures have been made to former Gov. E. Lee Trinkle, of Roanoke, to oppose Senator Byrd, but he is disinclined.

Col. Parke P. Deans, of Isle of Wight, chairman of the Second District Committee, favors a convention. The convention of 1932, in which Darden was nominated without opposition, served to heal factional party wounds in the district.

A State-wide primary for nomination of a candidate for the United States Senate must be held.

Senator Byrd, anticipating his own campaign, observed a "hands off" policy with respect to the recent General Assembly session. He took no part in the dispute over redistricting the State for Congressional representation.

Winchester Dry Under Old Law

Ancient Statute Bars Drinks Within City.

Winchester, Va., March 18 (Spl.). While most Virginians were viewing with enthusiasm the advent of legalized liquor in this State next Thursday, Winchesterians today feared the city night remain "dry," due to an old local option law.

Winchester voted on local option several years before the State adopted prohibition in 1916. The law remains on the books.

When repeal of State prohibition was voted in October, Winchester went wet. There appears little doubt that the city dry law will be repealed.

Association Aims to Sign Up All Officers in County.

A campaign to enlist Montgomery County's 200 Reserve officers is being started by the Montgomery Chapter, Reserve Officers Association, according to Heber H. Rice, of Chevy Chase, secretary of the local chapter.

Plans for the membership drive were outlined at a meeting of the chapter in the Bethesda County Building. It was pointed out that the present membership is already more than one-fourth of the total.

Striking similarities between the cause of human warfare and combats in the animal and insect kingdoms were cited by Maj. Leon M. Fox, of the Medical Corps of the United States Army.

Maj. Fox declared that food, either directly or indirectly, was the cause of nearly all major military campaigns, pointing out that overcrowding and overpopulation of nations, resulting in a shortage of food, had been responsible for virtually every war in the world's history. The same situation exists in the animal world, he said, in declaring that animals seldom fight for any other cause.

Air Mail Bill Change Is Set By Roosevelt

Army Resumes Routes; "Waived Claim" in Plan Scrapped.

leave from Oakland, Calif., at 12:20 a. m. (Pacific Time). Washington's unit of the air mail was in complete readiness yesterday and the first plane was to leave at 4:30 a. m. bound for Atlanta.

Piloted by Lieut. Harry Carr, blind flying instructor, stationed here, the plane, an 0-38-B was to leave Bolling Field with 350 pounds of mail. The first plane out of the Newark Airport, southbound, was to leave at 10:25 a. m. with Lieut. A. L. Harvey at the controls, arriving in Washington at 1 p. m. Lieut. W. A. Fernander will take off from Atlanta and is scheduled to arrive here at 1:30 p. m. today.

In the absence of Gen. Fulois, now on an inspection tour, Brig. Gen. Oscar Westover, assistant chief of the Army Air Corps, last night expressed belief that the Army fliers were "all set" and would perform their duty efficiently.

"We have been checking on all equipment and many improvements have been made. Such inspection as has been made. Such inspection as has been made is, of course, routine," he said.

Radio Range Improved.

Capt. C. V. Haynes, commanding officer at the air-mail base at Bolling Field, explained yesterday that radio equipment now installed in planes has a 150-mile beacon range and a 125-mile voice range. New instrument boards have been installed to eliminate vibration, which heretofore caused pilots much confusion. Along the Department of Commerce airways, radio ground equipment to maintain constant two-way communication has been set up during the past week.

"All pilots will check in with this office before taking off," Capt. Haynes said, "and they will communicate with us after getting in the air and before landing at their destinations.

"Even though the weather forecast looks bad," he continued, "it looks as though we're going to make a go of it this time."

Capt. Haynes has 9 officers and 18 enlisted men on his staff at Bolling Field. He said that 11 planes of the observation type were now ready and that 10 are being held with the possibility of 30 planes being on hand soon.

All air-mail pilots, hereafter, he said, will have flown a minimum of 500 hours and two years experience All pilots will be regular Army officers, many of the mhaving 1,000 hours in the air, among the first to resume flying the routes.

Bombing Planes Out.

While the O-38-B's will be used at first, 0-38-E's and F's with inclosed cockpits will be used later. Bombing planes will not be used. The B's carry 350 pounds and the E's and F's 500 pounds of mail.

After a personal inspection tour of flying stations and equipment in the Eastern and Central zones, Gen. Foulois, who is expected here Wednesday, announced that he was well satisfied and that "everything is in readiness to resume operations."

Flying will be resumed on these routes today:

Boston to New York, New York to Atlanta and Jacksonville, Chicago to Dallas, Salt Lake City to San Diego, Salt Lake City to Seattle, Cheyenne to Denver, New York to Chicago and Chicago to San Francisco. Routes have been reduced from 18 to 8, approximately one-fourth of the mileage flown by commercial operators.

Army Air-Mail Armistice Ends

*With reconditioned planes, more adequate instruments, and two-way radio, Army fliers yesterday embarked on the second chapter of their hazardous peace-time mission. Upper photo shows plane assignments on schedule board at Bolling Field as part of the Washington squadron looks on. Left to right—Lieut. E. R. Todd, Lieut. C. W. O'Connor and Capt. C. V. # The Champion's Champion

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, March 18.—The story of the week, or rather of the week-end, now shifts to a spot where the grass is fresh and the sun shines warmly and the pennants marking the greens from 1 to 18 snap bravely in the Southern breeze.

In Augusta, Ga., the champion of champions, the greatest all-around public figure that sport has ever known, Robert Tyre Jones, will undertake the most audacious and nerve-trying comeback in all the history of competition.

The quiet, modest young man who once spread-eagled the amateur and professional field when he took the miraculous "grand slam" of golf, the two major titles of Great Britain and the United States in one year, has had the gall after a three-year retirement to invite the greatest professional golfers in the United States to come down to his back yard and lick him if they can.

If Jones can win this tournament it will be a greater gesture even than that supreme moment in the career of Babe Ruth when, with the count 2 and 2 on him, he pointed with his finger where he was going to sock the next one, and then poled the pitch out of the park.

Master Jones retired from active golf in 1930, resigned his status as an amateur, made motion pictures for pelf, joined the staff of a sporting goods house and admitted himself a professional. Since then, the golf pros have been yearning for the time when they would get him back into competition as a professional and not as an amateur. Coolly and impudently, Jones is giving them that opportunity, asking no quarter, omitting no golf star who could possibly be a threat to him. The best that we have to offer, including a dozen new stars who have sprung up in the last two years, will be in the small army against which, as everyone knows, he will compete single handed and against odds that are almost insuperable. It is a grand, gallant, swashbuckling gesture. I would give a lot to see him get away with it.

To give you a picture of the odds against which Jones goes, you must understand that any one of the seventy-odd golfers that Jones has invited to celebrate the opening of his Augusta course is capable of playing the four rounds in par or 4 or 5 strokes under par.

The boys will have plenty of rest, since they are playing 18 holes a day over four days instead of 36 on the final day, itself a great physical as well as nervous strain!

If 50 of the professionals fail, there are still 20 left to succeed. If 69 fall down, there is always the seventieth to come through. Jones is a loner. He gets only one chance. If his game blows up on him he is done for. I suspect that the Nation will watch this amazing golf match, hole by hole and day by day, as few tournaments have been watched.

Golden Gloves intercity boxing show or no Golden Gloves, this department will be tagging at the heels of Master Jones for every shot. There has never been a man I so wanted to see win, never a public sports hero for whom I have had as much respect and genuine liking, in all the years that I have been reporting him. Of all the celebrities I have known over an 11-year stretch of sports writing, there has been none who has measured up as Jones has, none who has been such a complete master of his sport, such a thorough champion and at the same time such a complete human being and genuine gentleman.

I have never known Jones to do anything snide, publicly or privately; never known him to presume upon his fame in his conduct toward others of lesser brilliance; never seen him other than a real man whom men can respect.

When you look back over his years of competition and rise to fame and realize that never once in that time has he been involved in any news headlines other than those reporting his golf games or his career, that he has been as graceful in victory as he was in defeat, that he is a golfing idol of the British and the Scotch as well as of his own countrymen, that he won the hearts of these ordinarily cold North men as well as their trophies, that he has never been rude or ill-mannered to his followers, you will understand why so many thousands will be following this latest test he has imposed upon his skill and his nerves, and following him with their hearts as well as their eyes.

This show will be one of the reporting treats of the year. I can't wait to get down there. I'm leaving Tuesday for Augusta. What a show that will be!

Landers Seeks To Regain Prestige

Former Favorite Fights Dougan at Portner's Tomorrow Night.

ONCE the greatest local drawing card, blond, busy Billy Landers seems a certainty to again take the place he formerly occupied on top of this vicinity's featherweight heap—if he can get over LeRoy Dougan in a six-rounder at Portner's tomorrow night. Dougan has twice stopped his march back to the top at Portner's by pounding out not-too-substantial decisions, but Landers evened accounts in a recent Norfolk encounter by knocking out the Arkansas Toy Bulldog in two rounds.

The first of Dougan's wins over Landers was a very close affair and the second was none to decisive. According to his manager, Chris Dundee, Landers was badly hampered by an injured hand in both engagements. Dougan claims he was given an ultraspeedy count in Landers' backyard, and advances the rapid arithmetic as the reason for his first knockout.

Wright Fights Parks.

Cary Wright, Harry Groves' rapidly advancing welterweight prospect, encounters another rapidly rising lad in the person of Al Parks, of Baltimore. Parks occupies approximately the same position in Baltimore ring rankings as Wright does here and the meeting between the two might well be billed as an elimination contest of prospects.

Roddy Davis again has been dusted off and will be tossed in against one Milton Gross—whoever he may be. In his last local appearance, Davis was given the scare of a lifetime by roly, poly Benny Adler, who belted him about without due respect to his stellar position in local affairs for two rounds. Davis fought coolly back, however, to throw the tide of battle decisively in his favor.

Clarence Sloat tackles Benny Victor in the remaining six. Two fours between Al Dintaman and Joe Perenta and Bill Howell and Jack McCarthy will round out the bill.

Liner Fights 100-Mile Gale; Delayed 8 Hours

Plymouth, Eng., March 18 (U.P.). The liner Lafayette arrived here late tonight eight hours overdue and severely buffeted by a storm it encountered at sea.

Waves sometimes 75 feet high crashed over the vessel's decks, smashing at least 50 windows, passengers reported. A 100-mile gale piled up seas which sometimes caused the huge steamship to heel over at a 40-degree angle.

State Reserve Corps to Meet At Blacksburg

Pistol and Rifle Contests Planned With V. P. I. Cadet Review.

Alexandria, Va., March 18 (AP).—The Virginia department of the Reserve Officers' Association will hold its eighth annual convention at Blacksburg April 20-21.

This was announced today by Lieut. Col. Jarvis Butler, of Alexandria, president. He said the invitation of the Gen. Richard Montgomery Chapter, of Blacksburg, had been accepted and a program arranged in which cadets of Virginia Polytechnic Institute would participate.

Tentative plans proposed in the invitation, he said, include a parade and review of the V. P. I. corps of cadets, pistol and rifle competition for the department's President's Cup, the annual dinner of the State association and a military ball for reserve officers and senior reserve officer training corps students.

Local reserve organizations affiliated with the Virginia department are located at Alexandria, Richmond, Charlottesville, Staunton, Covington, Clifton Forge, Newport News, Norfolk, Lynchburg, Danville, Roanoke and Abingdon.

Other officers besides Butler are Lieut. Norwood A. Eaton, jr., Charlottesville, vice president; Lieut. Wilmer R. Burgess, Charlottesville, secretary-treasurer, and Capt. Walter S. Thomas, Staunton, chaplain.

the traitorous element." Then Senator McKellar rapped on the table with an ash tray and admonished the flier against making a political speech or "attacking the President." Then Col. Rickenbacker folded up his papers and departed.

Col. Rickenbacker has recommended that an impartial Federal board be created to pass on aviation companies whose mail contracts were canceled. He has recommended also that air lines that could not exist under the proposed rates be given a direct subsidy not to exceed 40 cents per air-plane mile for the first year.

He will be introduced by Claude W. Owen, president of the Board of Trade. Entertainment will be furnished by the George Washington University Glee Club.

Worker Caught In Oven, 'Bakes' For 45 Minutes

New York, March 18 (AP).—William Philupe, repair man, was trapped for 45 minutes today in a baker's oven at 350 degrees Fahrenheit.

He was rescued by a police emergency squad and taken to Beekman Street Hospital. His condition was serious.

Philupe crawled into the oven just after the fire was drawn to repair the ash-sifting apparatus. He was unable to back out through the 16-inch oven door and bakery workers could not pull him out. He weighed 200 pounds.

Water could not be poured into the oven because the temperature, 138 degrees over the boiling point, might have caused suffocation by steam.

Navy Plane Awards Irregularity Bared

"negotiated" noncompetitive contracts for experimental airplanes and engines. The second calls for purchases, in quantities, of experimental airplanes and engines which have been tested and found satisfactory.

In 1928, Curtiss Dwight Wilbur, then Secretary of the Navy, asked Congress to change that second stipulation so quantity contracts for equipment tested could be bought without competitive bidding.

On January 12, 1931, D. F. Sellers, Judge Advocate General, returned a lengthy ruling on a proposal of the Navy's aeronautics bureau to grant a negotiated quantity contract under the authority of the last half of section (k).

In that ruling he said:

Express Authority Lacking.

"Section (k) lacks the express terms that are requisite to a grant of power to award the quantity production contract until the matter shall have been subjected to competition and * * * such power can not be derived by inference from the language actually used in the subsection."

Sellers held the only way in which such a purchase could be "legally affected" would be through Congressional enactment of the change in law asked by Secretary Wilbur three years earlier. The law has not yet been changed.

The Congressional investigators have before them a list of contracts awarded by the Navy since 1926. Until Wilbur's letter in 1928, most purchases were made under section (k). After that, most quantity purchases were made under section (q).

But the Comptroller General reported several subsequent big contracts awarded under (k). They included:

October 26, 1931, 18 planes, $50,827; October 18, 1932, 28 planes and parts, $515,579; April 9, 1931, 12 planes, parts, data, &c., $553,320; June 29, 1929, 112 engines and spares, $1,008,639; November 21, 1929, 50 engines and spares, $216,564; March 10, 1930, 72 engines, $540,697.

Hulk of La Salle's Ship Believed Found

St. Ignace, Mich., March 18 (AP). Oliver Bridge, one of the discoverers of the hulk believed to have been Robert Chevalier de La Salle's ship, the Griffin, lost in 1679, said today that no further salvage work would be conducted until some of the metal taken from the wreckage has been analyzed.

The hulk which Bridge and Mike Osogowin, Chippewa Indian, found lying in shallow water off Hessel, Mich., in upper Lake Huron, is believed by them to indicate a vessel of seventeenth century construction.

Eli Hath Need Of Thee.

With almost each recurrence of spring Harvard gets into the news. After the first few columns have sprouted even the Boston Transcript begins suspecting the hand of Lampy. Last year the vernal urge sent flat-heeled Harvard boys to the State House, where they accomplished the most sublimely ridiculous of their many feats, the theft of the famous Sacred Codfish which is a symbol of the Commonwealth itself. And now, Handsome Dan, a bulldog, has vanished from his New Haven kennels and Lampy has let it be known that not until the Ibis, stuffed-bird mascot of the allegedly humorous Harvard publication, has been returned, will the canine treasure of Yale be allowed to go back. Thus keeps up the eternal feud between Cambridge and New Haven which has brought gray hairs to the head of Charley Apted, Harvard Yard sleuth extraordinary, whose ability for returning codfish and bulldogs, at least, is unquestioned.

We are not so much interested in the ever-emerging predatory instinct of Harvard youth as we are in Handsome Dan. What kind of a bulldog is he? Not of that ancient breed that Frank Dole made famous when he was a trainer at Yale. Some alien strain has crept in. Dr. Whitney, curator of the collection of stuffed dogs at the Yale museum, should investigate. For it is a sad situation that New Haven is allowing such a dog as Handsome Dan to be bred at all.

When Frank Dole was training Yale runners and making the bulldog famous, the outstanding trait, we have always heard, was that his dogs infallibly would see red whenever the name Harvard was mentioned. Let a Harvard man so much as come near, no chain would hold a Dole bulldog. Now, alas, the bulldog blood has so thinned, that all Lampy had to do was say "Nice doggy," and Handsome Dan trotted off peacefully to Cambridge. Why, when Dole was young, a breath of Cambridge air would madden any bulldog.

Come, Frank Dole, forget the cocker spaniels and the field trials of your later years. Eli hath need of thee in such an hour!

Not a Question of Law.

Nobody would deny that the hearings before the Senate subcommittee on the Wagner-Costigan Federal antilynching bill have publicized deplorable facts. With the Eastern Shore of Maryland as one of the worst examples, the country has had emphasized what it already knew: that there has been a resurgence of extra-legal punishment and that there has been shamefully lax enforcement of laws.

All that may be granted readily, but it does not wipe away the underlying objection to the Federal antilynch law. This is that no matter how ineffective, local authority is the most potent instrument for dealing with lynching and lynchers. Punishment in any event depends upon local sentiment. It is a mistake to assume that the threat to punish a county in which a lynching takes place will have any value as a preventive. The only real preventive is a sentiment aroused against lynching as barbaric, antisocial and anticivilized. Such sentiment is not achieved by law; it comes from education.

Those who observe social trends do not find the growth of mob violence surprising at such a time as this. And it is not proven that the temporary lapse is adequate reason to abandon the educational method in favor of one which offers even less hope of success than the experiment in prohibition. To enact a Federal antilynching law would be to make much the same mistake the temperance advocates made: they abandoned education and gradual contraction of a social evil in favor of a rush movement to obtain a statute. Laws are much easier to obtain than enlightenment of local sentiment. They are also much less effective.

The Best Defense Is Attack.

Senator Dill has discovered suddenly that the "telephone monopoly" has been overlooked by Government investigators and he seems to feel that this shocking inadvertence calls for a probe into its origins and methods. It may be a mere coincidence that this announcement follows so shortly after Walter S. Gifford, president of the A. T. & T., appeared before the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee to oppose the Dill bill providing for strict governmental supervision of telephone and other communications agencies. However, experience has shown that probes and threats of probes have been employed for many purposes unrelated to the search for germane information.

Certainly the prosecuting zeal of Mr. Pecora, suggested as chief investigator, is not needed to prove that the A. T. & T. is a monopoly. And Senator Dill had all the facts that he considered necessary to the formulation of regulatory plans. Under the circumstances, it is hard to see what constructive purpose such an investigation would serve.

Meantime attention would be distracted from the matter of immediate concern. This is the proposal to establish a Federal Communications Commission which, in the opinion of Mr. Gifford, would constitute a centralized bureaucratic agency with the power to set up a regime of public management of private property. Regulation is essential; but, as pointed out by the president of the A. T. & T., there is a vast difference between those Federal laws which regulate private business and those which invade the field of private management.

The Railway Wage Dispute.

The Railway Executives' Association, representing railway labor, has rejected the proposal of the carriers to continue the 10 per cent cut in basic rates of pay beyond June 30, when the present agreement expires. The railway managers had previously announced an intention of demanding a cut of 15 per cent in basic wage rates. Their offer to prolong the 10 per cent reduction was made only after President Roosevelt had intervened, to urge maintenance of the status quo for a limited period.

An open break between the rail unions and the roads, leading to a tie up of the country's transportation systems, would suggest much more alarming possibilities of economic and social strife than the feared outbreak of strikes in the automobile industry. These major threats to continued business improvement are currently linked together as evidences of the industrial unrest created by the recovery program, but there are some very significant differences between the two cases.

In the automobile industry, trouble has arisen over union organization problems and questions concerning the accredited representatives of the workers in bargaining negotiations under the recovery act. In the case of the railroads, the representative character of the labor delegates who speak for the employes is not questioned. The workers state their demands authoritatively and the employers present their counter proposals. If the two sides fail to agree, the adjustment machinery provided by the railway labor act may still be employed to assist a peaceful settlement.

Here is an industry in which the machinery of collective bargaining had been fully developed before the NRA had been heard of. Although this method of open discussion does not guarantee a reasonable solution of the economic issues in dispute, it does enable the merits of the opposing arguments to be weighed and brings the force of public opinion to bear upon any group making excessive demands.

Maintenance of the status quo, as President Roosevelt urges, represents the limit of concessions that can safely be made until the roads have had an opportunity to increase their earnings. Despite the pronounced improvement which has occurred in recent months, Class I railway net operating income averaged only 1.80 per cent on invested property in 1933, according to reports made to the Bureau of Railway Economics. Even in January, operating income reached only the annual rate of 2.16 per cent on invested capital. This should be a sufficient answer to the contention of labor's spokesmen that the top heavy capital structure, with its burden of bonded debt, is the sole cause of railway receivershins and the reason for the depressed state of labor in the industry.

Wage reductions and other operating economies have helped the roads to offset drastic declines in gross revenues during a period of depression. They still have a long way to go before business recovery will warrant additions to wage outlays. Railway labor will not benefit in the long run by making premature demands for advances in wages. Profit-making railway systems offer more and better employment opportunities than those handicapped by expenditures which anticipate the earnings of future business expansion.

A New Movie Queen.

Critics of the screen may disagree over the abilities of Miss Katherine Hepburn as an actress, but the greater public will happily receive the news that the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences has chosen her as queen of them all for 1933. Miss Hepburn is unassuming and very much in love with her work. Like Miriam Hopkins and one or two other screen actresses, she has won her place in American affections by diligent efforts and a minimum of press agentry.

A native of Connecticut, Miss Hepburn has not needed the foreign manners that have been so helpful to the Garbos and Dietrichs of recent years. Well bred, well educated, she has insisted always upon being herself. Too much so, those who saw her in "The Lake" may say. This independence of spirit, together with a passion for the theater, both stage and screen, have brought her success more quickly and more deservedly than the devious route of Hollywood publicity.

Her career, which in many ways parallels that of Miss Hopkins, is proof that hard work on the legitimate stage and willingness to be a trouper before aspiring to stardom has its compensations. Even the movies demand real ability, although sometimes one is doubtful if the powers that be in Hollywood are aware of this fact. The paths followed by these two popular young women, one through the chorus and the Theater Guild, the other through stock companies and the little theater, offer definite encouragement to young women who are willing to improve their art by hard work.

Miss Hepburn, aware of the Academy's award, eluded reporters in New York and fled to England via a third class gangplank at the last minute. This Garboesque feat is in keeping with her philosophy that on the stage or screen she belongs to the public, but elsewhere she is Mrs. Ogden Ludlow Smith, private citizen, who likes to play golf and tennis, read books, and travel without benefit of press agentry. In this manner she remains a refreshing character.

Hands Across The Alps.

Premier Mussolini's attempt to rescue Austria and Hungary from the slough of economic depression and political turmoil brings into bold relief the revolutionary changes that have come over Central Europe in the last hundred years. Under the autocratic influence of Metternich, Austria-Hungary was the dominant power in Europe a century ago. Napoleon's empire had been crushed. Italy was still a group of disunited states. Austria had extended her southern border to the Po, the Ticino and Lago Maggiore. Lombardy and Venice had been incorporated into the monarchy of the Hapsburgs. Francis I even considered reassumption of the title of Roman Emperor, but Metternich persuaded him that a loose association of the Italian state under Austrian domination would be a more practicable arrangement.

Now Italy has assumed, in the three pacts signed at the Palazzo Venezia, a protective attitude toward these broken fragments of the once powerful Austria-Hungarian Empire. The tables have turned completely. As a representative of the united Italian state, which after the war acquired a valuable slice of Austrian territory, Premier Mussolini undertakes the role of strong man in Central Europe.

The distressed peoples of Austria are not thinking much, however, about the strange quirks of history. What hope does the three power pacts offer for peace and stability under present conditions? Premiers Mussolini, Dollfuss and Goemboes have virtually agreed to follow a common international policy. This means a united front against the encroaching influence of the Nazis. When a crisis arises in either Austria or Hungary officials may summon a three-power conference with the view of preserving the independence and rights of the existing states. No one can foresee how an arrangement of this kind will work out, but it is nevertheless a well-timed blow at Nazi diplomacy.

Actually the economic pact is of more importance than the consultation agreement. Preferential treatment will be granted to Austrian manufactured goods by Italy and Hungary. Likewise Hungary's agricultural products will be admitted more freely into the other two contracting countries. It appears that Italy has made substantial concessions in the hope of saving Austria from absorption by the Nazis. Any reasonable move toward lower trade barriers in the Balkans is encouraging. The three-power economic pacts give Austria new hope that reasonable stability may be attained without the aid of Hitler.

An aspect of continuity is given to these economic agreements by the creation of a permanent commission of experts "to watch and develop the economic relations among the three countries." If this agency proves to be effective, the pacts just negotiated may be only a first step toward economic cooperation in Central Europe. Certainly this rapprochement is the most hopeful development in the tangled Austrian problem in recent months.

Our Forgotten City.

The people of Washington are all too familiar with the neglect of schools in the District as depicted by Senator Capper. His statement is significant chiefly because it indicates that some members of Congress are aware of the handicaps under which the District has been placed. The Senator from Kansas has taken occasion to investigate actual conditions resulting from the parsimonious policy which Congress has followed in recent years with respect to the District. If Congress as a body would consider the local budget in its relation to community needs, portable shacks would no longer be used for schools, nor would unsocial and insanitary slums mar the beauty of the Capital's finest structures.

Most Congressmen come and go without giving any personal attention to their duties as city councilmen for Washington. Their interests are chiefly with their home districts. Officials of the Budget Bureau as well as the committees on Capitol Hill that draft District appropriation bills are more concerned with general principles of economy than with the actual problems of Washington as a community. As Senator Capper says, the result may be false economy. The Commissioners attempt to bridge the gap between the people and Congress, but they too are handicapped by an absurd arrangement that makes them subservient to the Budget Bureau.

Because of this situation the disfranchised citizens of this city are especially appreciative of a sympathetic understanding of their problems by a member of Congress. Certainly the fiscal relationship between the District and the Government and the broad problem of developing the Capital City are of sufficient importance to warrant active interest on the part of the most capable men in Congress.

A Question of Patriotism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your paper of March 10 carried a story of the meeting of the so-called Progressive Education Association at the Mayflower Hotel at which "Dr. Howard K. Beale, historian," stated, according to your paper, that the Daughters of the American Revolution, the American Legion, and other patriotic organizations were "effective factors against freedom of education." This man also gave vent to other statements of a derogatory nature.

Truly patriotic organizations are aware of the foreign source from which this self-styled "Progressive Education Association" derives its strength and substance.

It is reasonable to expect a certain class of people to "fuss at" and find fault with the organizations toward which Dr. Beale directs his attack. However, the great mass of real Americans have a mighty warm place in their hearts for the "Daughters," also for the men of the "Legion," and as the teachings, principles, platforms, &c., of the two organizations named are along the line of those laid down by that illustrious leader, George Washington, it is hardly worth while to tilt lances with the Progressive Education Association, and others of its ilk.

In closing the writer desires to say that he is a veteran who had several ancestors in the Revolution and will still revere the memory of the latter no matter how hard Dr. Beale may try to belittle those of proven patriotism and established ancestry. A PATRIOT.

Army Air Casualties.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of March 15, Gen. Foulois, Army Air Service chief, declares that recent Army air casualties "have not been excessive in any way, shape or form." He cites the record of 50 deaths in 1932 and 46 in 1933. "To date (for 1934) he asserts there have been 39 deaths" and that "according to the law of averages, there will, of course, be more."

President Roosevelt, in his caustic letter of rebuke to the Army, stated that during the time the Army attempted to fly the mails 10 Army airmen lost their lives in 18 days.

"This is only the beginning of the reorganization of flying, commercial, civil and military," asserts Gen. Foulois. That "reorganization" is long overdue, the public will heartily agree. Undoubtedly, the "reorganization" should not fail to embrace those high officials who apparently have learned nothing from the tragic deaths of many gallant young men.

Futility of Pacifism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The fallacy of supposing that the "big stick" necessarily provokes war is well illustrated by the fact that in 1829, when South Carolina seceded from the Union, the hard-boiled, two-fisted Andrew Jackson nipped the rebellion in the bud by bluntly notifying the State to get back into the Union, otherwise Charleston would be shelled. South Carolina got back.

In 1860, when a pacifist occupied the White House and South Carolina seceded, nothing was done. As a result, when Lincoln took office he found the Nation split in twain and chaos ruled. A call for 75,000 volunteers was made, as the Nation was "unprepared." If at that time the Union had possessed a well-trained Army the Southern capital could have been taken within a few weeks and order restored. But a ghastly conflict followed, due to unpreparedness.

The "Open Shop."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When the Chamber of Commerce and the Manufacturers Association made their decision as to the meaning of section 7a of the National recovery act, placing such organizations as the American Federation of Labor in the hole, they opened up the way for the open shop discussion.

The open shop is an utter impossibility among union men, for it means the removal of the keystone of unionism. It has often been demonstrated that the unionist and the nonunionist can not exist on an equitable basis in the same "shop."

Any employer who has gone through the strife of conducting an open shop will throw the weight of his evidence in favor of the strictly run union shop. Should the open shop obtain a foothold to any great extent, then a minimum number of union workmen would be employed. Were the open shop to prevail, then the trade unionists had better surrender their charters and their manhood, retire from the field of labor and let chaos reign supreme.

The promoters of the open shop are only promoting war and strife within their own peaceful boundaries—they but kill the goose that lays the golden eggs.

WILLIAM S. WAUDBY.

The Ex-Bootlegger.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There are a million or more bootleggers and their dependents in this country making a living, independent of the CWA, CCC and other Governmental alphabetical pay rolls. The big idea is to cut off the living of these people, because the Government and liquor trusts are losing some revenue and big profits, and thus make these people applicants for the Governmental doles.

We have not done enough for the French and other foreign defaulting nations, so we must let down the bars and flood the country with beer and imported liquor products. The Government can then support the ex-bootleggers who won't have to still for a living; the Government will have all in the fold; satisfying everybody, including the defaulting nations, by restoring the balance of trade. W. M. O.

Titusville, Fla., March 12.

Answering Mr. Nichols.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am going to refute the statement carried on the front page of your paper March 9, coming from J. M. Nichols, banker of Chicago and Englewood.

According to Mr. Nichols, the time to borrow and loan money is when there is reestablished the old order and rule of things under which the sufferings of labor and agriculture and small business were ignored.

Recovery, however, will not be entire until small business is able to go somewhere and receive financial assistance, and if the banks are determined to continue to refuse to do their part, thereby contributing to further failure and unemployment, the Government must provide this credit through some governmental agency or means. Until this is done, public confidence on the part of 80 per cent of the business of the country will not be reestablished. H. C. HINES.

Washington.

The U. S. Air Force.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is high time that the Government acquainted itself and the public with the facts concerning the strength and efficiency of our air forces.

There are four divisions in military flying—pursuit, bombardment, observation and attack. All require knowledge and skill in aerial combat and cross-country. Since the regular Army showed themselves unprepared to fly cross-country, imagine the height of efficiency of reserves! If they had been called upon to fly cross-country in unfavorable weather the death list would have been increased many times. The reserves have no attack planes whatever. Considering the fact that they are allowed only four hours a month, they are pretty good at boring a hole in the air in obsolete equipment, but unquestionably are not trained military and naval aviators in any sense of the word.

It is high time that the Government survey the present arrangement, make the facts known to the public, and organize a new and effective system for building up and maintaining an adequate regular and reserve air force in keeping with the needs of the United States.

ELIOT WALKER.

Insull's Escapades Recall Boss Tweed

The strange adventures of Mr. Insull recall the fate of William M. Tweed. It was on December 4, 1875, that Boss Tweed escaped from Ludlow Street Jail, where, after serving a year in prison on criminal charges, he was being held in $3,000,000 bail to await trial in a civil suit. For three months he lived in a house across the Hudson as Mr. John Secor, an invalid gentleman who needed rest and fresh air. He shaved off his famous beard and wore a wig and a pair of gold-rimmed spectacles. Later he fled to Cuba in a fishing boat, and from there to Spain on the bark Carmen; during the voyage he was so seasick that he lost 100 pounds in weight. On his arrival at Vigo he was immediately arrested at the request of Hamilton Fish, then Secretary of State, and on his identification by means of one of Thomas Nast's famous cartoons. This showed him grasping a child, and the Spaniards took him for a kidnaper.

There was then no extradition treaty with Spain, but a young charge named Alvey Adee arranged with the authorities to have him put on board the United States cruiser Franklin, which happened to be in the Mediterranean at the time. Tweed was escorted to the wharf at night by a military guard of 30 soldiers, "in order to prevent any violent expression of sentimental indignation on the part of the populace." We are told by Mr. Werner, historian of Tammany Hall, that instructions were given to the commander of the Franklin to treat the prisoner with courtesy and consideration, but to guard him carefully to prevent his escape or suicide. Tweed spent most of his time on board reading the newspapers; the ship's officers found him "thoroughly posted in New York politics." He arrived in New York Harbor November 23, 1876, and was taken off in a tug and landed at Pier 46. In his nervousness he tripped on the gangplank and fell into a heap of coal.

When asked about his flight, Tweed said that some friends urged him to go to Turkey or to Egypt, where the telegraph could not so easily locate him, but he finally picked Spain, hoping that in the absence of an extradition treaty the Spanish authorities would not surrender him. He was taken back to Ludlow Street Jail, where he died.

The Post Impressionist

The Gallant Aristide

This newspaper's own Virginia Lee Warren is authority for it: "Plump women languish . . . slender figures rule the mode."

Therefore we ask ourselves: "Will modish women contribute to the international fund for a monument in memory of the work toward world peace performed by the late and great Aristide Briand?" For the truth is that he did not admire slim women.

* * * *

At the age of 67, and the height of his influence, he was talking informally with a group of assiduous feminine pacifists.

"I am glad you insisted on being brought here," he told them. "You mustn't be hurt by the manners of my well-intentioned doorkeepers. They are merely trying to protect my old age, but they will have to learn to cease protecting me against people whom I especially want to consult; and I always want to consult with women. In woman, as the bearer and rearer of man, lies this earth's greatest human hope for international peace."

* * * *

Two hours later, the Post-Impressionist—then more impressionable than Post—was lunching with M. Briand in a quiet restaurant corner. The great pacifier sighed:

"It used to be such a delight to talk to women; recently, however, something most unfortunate has happened to the whole sex."

"Nobody," we ventured to remind him, "is quite so young as he was yesterday."

"Ha!" he protested. "It is not my age that has happened: rest assured, no! Perhaps it is that this modern mania for dieting affects women as much mentally as physically. How they used to eat—and agree with whatever opinions one uttered! It was never necessary for a generous host to weigh his words: women doubled the pleasures of dining. Now, on the other hand, they make any meeting with them an ordeal. They are seeking slimness and achieving only angularity."

* * * *

When, a fervent Socialist, Briand came from his native Nantes to the Chamber of Deputies, he formed what was to prove a lifelong friendship with Andre Antoine, remaker of the Odeon, maker of the Theatre Antoine, re-creator for France of the arts of acting and dramatic criticism. From this master, young Aristide took histrionic lessons.

With what result? The stage lost a great boxoffice attraction to the rostrum.

Briand's political audiences in France called him "The Charmer," "The Lullaby-Singer;" his Genevese political audiences called him "The Awakener." He had cultivated the voice of a purling rill for his openings, of a tidal-wave for his climaxes. Every gesture was his, from the graceful embrace of a brother to the rending blow of the lion—every facial expression, from that of an old nurse, which he really did prevent from becoming absurd, to that of a snarling gorilla, into which he tortured every element of terrorization.

But remember Cicero: "The greatest art is the art that conceals art." Or George Santayana: "To portray passion is admirable, to betray it is detestable." Briand would have made a great fortune for any theatrical manager, but Briand did not become a great actor: he became an actor who forgot himself in whatever role he was playing. He meant what he said.

* * * *

Thus would we explain his attitude toward women—and, in the Geneva where so much of his work was done, women became a more and more important influence upon international opinion. Until very nearly the end of his magnificent career there, he continued to consult with the delegations of their many peace societies, listened to them gravely, not infrequently followed some portion of their infinite advice. Yet, when among men, he rarely considered women as something quite serious: for, if they were serious, how could they be entertaining?

* * * *

Years and an American woman were required to affect that annoying tolerance. The Arms Conference approached, along with Briand's death. Also approaching were two elections, one in France, one in Germany. With other officials of some feminine peace organization, that American woman asked and obtained, one morning, a conference with Aristide Briand.

Afterward, all the women concerned declared the interview was public; Briand, with equal emphasis, declared it solemnly promised to secrecy. The women said they were accompanied by a competent stenographer, who recorded verbatim all that was uttered; the lone man said plainly that this statement was entirely mistaken.

Anyhow, the American-captained committee, or some one of its members, caused publication, in a local afternoon newspaper, of what purported to be the text of Briand's remarks at the interview: promises of such concessions to the Reich as would delight Germany and defeat anybody at any polling-booth in France! The story was flashed to the newspapers of both countries; only Briand's categorical, enfuriated and more than instant denials saved him then; today, there are politicians who believe that the real effect came later, that this was the real beginning of Briand's political end.

"Until this morning," he himself said that evening, "I have never whispered to any woman any syllable that could affect the internal politics of my own country. After today's experience, I will never whisper any syllable on any political subject whatever to any politically minded woman, nationalist or internationalist!"

And he kept his word.

Carlisle Bargeron

I DON'T understand why the author of the "New Dealers" did not point out that the great planner, Prof. Rexford Tugwell, showed planning inclinations at a very early age, that, in fact, when he was about 23 years old, he had a most ambitious plan. These little human interest notes on the early lives of our heroes are always important, I think, as for example, is the story about George Washington chopping down the cherry tree.

BARGERON.

Well, it seems that when our hero, the professor, was at the University of Pennsylvania—as a graduate instructor, I take it—back in 1915, about the time the European nations were heartily engaged in going after each other's necks, he conceived the plan of taking several of his Delta Upsilon Fraternity brothers, at vacation time, up to work in his father's canning factory in up-State New York.

* * * *

This was all very good as a means of making money in vacation time. But when the boys all got up there, our hero decided that they should be formed into an organization of some kind. You can see he was thinking of organization at that early date.

Well, for no particular reason except that militarism was in the air, he determined upon a military set-up. As a result, he named one of the boys a general, another colonel and so on down the line to the privates. They were required to observe military salutations in their approach to one another as well as the military procedure in general. As I understand it, the professor didn't take any title himself. He was in fact, however, the commander in chief.

And looking back now his fellows realize that just whatever was the purpose of this "plan" of the professor's it resulted in his not having to do any work. The other boys had to can peas. The professor was simply the planner. Maybe, too, he wrote his observations of the development of the "plan" for a syndicate. I don't know about that.

* * * *

One of the things he undoubtedly learned about that planning, though, was that to have a wholly harmonious plan everybody must be generals. You can't have different ranks with the left-overs serving as privates. That is the source of discord in all society.

The professor's plan had gone along hardly any time when the privates decided they were getting tired of saluting their fraternity brothers, fellows who were canning peas just as they were doing. Just why there should be a general pea-canner and a colonel pea-canner and private pea-canners they could not understand.

So they revolted and the military set-up was dropped and thereafter they all canned peas on the same pea-canning social basis.

You know, it may have been this experience that caused the professor to evolve his present plan of making us all privates, of bringing the Morgans and Rockefellers down to the rest of us.

* * * *

There was another lesson he should have learned at that time, though the indications are that he did not.

His father's regular workers, it seems, were Italians, or mostly so. The peas would come into the plant, say twice a week, in trucks. On pea arrival day the trucks would be lined up for many blocks. As I get the story, it was necessary, once these peas arrived, to can them within 48 hours. They couldn't be fooled around with.

Well, these Italians would wait until the peas were all unloaded. Then they would strike. Every time, of course, their demands would have to be met.

The professor spent a lot of his time in solicitude for these fellows, I am told. He always had a plan or something for them. Yet it would seem, and it is understood that the professor's father so felt, that the Italians were very capable of taking care of themselves. And do you know, not one of them had ever been a professor of economics. All they knew about economics apparently was to wait until the peas came in and then strike.

G. U. to Honor Secchi Tonight

Reception to Capt. Hellweg Follows Lecture by Dr. McNally, S. J.

As a part of the tercentenary program, Georgetown University will open its astronomical observatory this evening to a large number of invited scientists.

The evening is dedicated to Angelo Secchi, one of the great astronomers and scientists of the early nineteenth century, who taught at Georgetown College for several years before he was recalled to Rome in 1850 to direct the observatory of the Roman College. His scientific discoveries are chronicled in the important journals of European countries and his researches in electrical rheometry were originally in the "Smithsonian Contributions to Knowledge."

Dr. Paul A. McNally, S. J., director of the Georgetown Observatory, will give an illustrated lecture at 8:15 p. m. in the Copley Lounge on "The Universe in Which We Dwell." After the lecture a reception will be given in honor of Capt. J. F. Hellweg, U. S. N., superintendent of the U. S. Naval Hospital.

The Georgetown and Naval Hospitals were founded in the same year and close cooperation in scientific work has always existed between the staffs.

The Pioneer Worked Hard And Without Orders

By Robert Quillen

When reformers attempt to improve the lot of mankind, they usually overlook the fact that one man's meat is another's poison.

When Henry Ford established a generous minimum wage for his employes, some of the foreign-born among them refused to quit the ways of poverty.

They enjoyed the herd intimacy of three families in a room; they regarded modern sanitation as an invasion of their rights; and they stoutly refused to be uplifted into the misery of cleanliness.

The sloping side of a volcano seems the ideal place of residence to those who were born there.

And that quirk of human nature is the greatest obstacle now confronting the well-meaning gentlemen who would solve the problem of unemployment by moving town people "back to the land."

It isn't a problem in economics alone. People can live happily only where they wish to live, and there are people who had rather depend on a city's charity than to have abundance in the country.

One who escapes the city's clamor will exclaim: "What blessed peace and quiet here in the open!" But another will moan: "It's so horribly lonely, and the silence is like a tomb."

But whatever the city worker may think of "the sticks," there is one consideration, usually overlooked, that soon may come to outweigh all disadvantages.

The country is the last refuge of freedom.

The government may tell the countryman how much wheat or cotton he can raise, but in other particulars he remains as free as the pioneers were.

Beyond any question, a nation organized as a unit and managed as a giant factory will attain a degree of efficiency and profit never before achieved.

But each advance in organization must mean another loss of liberty. And those who love liberty more than luxury or fame or wealth must at last emigrate to the country or live in grief and rebellious discontent.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors.

Harold Bell Wright.

I was impressed when reading a deeply thoughtful essay on American literature by our scholarly critic, Paul Elmer Moore by a passing allusion to Harold Bell Wright. Naturally he did not take this author very seriously and he devoted only a half sentence to him and his half-sentence was significant. He said, "I have a sneaking admiration for the rascal."

The novels of Wright, of the late Gene Stratton Porter, and the play "Abie's Irish Rose" are phenomena of interest to the student of human nature, however transient may be their position in the history of art. Why do such things charm and bewitch millions?

Personally, I did not care for "Abie's Irish Rose." It seemed to me too elementary both in its plot and in its technique. I was bored. But it is true that its sentiment and humor were real, and founded on basic facts in human nature.

The novels of Mrs. Porter sold nine million copies, and the same figure is given by the publishers for the sale of the books by Mr. Wright. Ordinarily, we estimate five readers for every book that is sold. Thus there were 45 million readers for each of these authors.

I have read only a few of Mr. Wright's novels and shall not read any more. But one thing is certain: He possesses a skill in that particular kind of writing which is equalled by no other living man. You often hear it said that anybody could write like that; and sometimes a novelist of limited popularity believes that he, too, could have enormous success if he chose to debase his art and write down to the public. Nothing could be farther from the truth. If it were easy to write books that would have a sale of nine million copies, thousands of authors would write them—merely for the easy money. Wright's books are successful because they appeal to something universal in men and women: smiles and tears, the love of virtue, of courage—in a word, everything included in the word sentimental.

I do not think it unfortunate that such books should be written, though they do not appeal to those who are intellectually mature. I think it is a good thing that they are read by millions of boys and girls. These children will learn from these books what magic there is in reading, and later they will transfer their admiration to books of higher worth, while still retaining a sneaking admiration for the rascal who first captivated them.

No End of Books

Theodore Hall

Frank Budgen met Joyce one evening on the Bahnhofstrasse in Zurich, and inquired about "Ulysses." Was it progressing?

"I have been working hard on it all day," said Joyce.

"Does that mean that you have written a great deal?"

"Two sentences," replied Joyce.

Budgen was incredulous. He glanced at his companion, but Joyce was not smiling. The thought of Flaubert came to Budgen, and he asked: "You have been seeking the 'mot juste'?"

"No," said Joyce. "I have the words. What I am seeking is the perfect order of words in the sentence."

* * * *

Such mild yet enlightening anecdotes as this give a peculiar interest to Budgen's book—"James Joyce and the Making of 'Ulysses'" (Smith & Haas, $2.50). Budgen was a painter, employed in the summer of 1918 in the British Consulate at Zurich. When, casually enough, he met Joyce—a tall, thin man with thick glasses, brick-red face, pointed beard of light orangey color, and a habit of listening to, but not looking at, a man—Joyce was distinctly cool. Later an easy friendship grew between the writer and the painter. Once Joyce recalled their first meeting, and laughingly said he had thought Budgen was a spy sent by the consulate to report on him.

Budgen asked why he had changed his mind.

"Because," said Joyce, "you looked like an English cricketer out of the W. G. Grace period."

* * * *

Joyce's apprehensions had some basis—the consulate and he were engaged, at the time, in a pretty lively dispute. To begin at the beginning, it seemed that George Moore, W. B. Yeats, and Edmund Gosse had heard that Joyce was hard up, and they secured for him a gift of 100 pounds from the Privy Purse. There were no strings, except a possible implication that Joyce should do something for the Allied cause. Joyce refused to enter journalism, but in company with some others he founded the English Players, and presented plays in English in the Swiss towns. Such cultural propaganda, he expected, would find consular approval and support. But the consulates kept mum.

At a performance of "The Importance of Being Earnest," however, a minor employe at the British consulate had a small part. The next day Joyce took around to the consulate the modest fee that was the actor's due.

The gentleman blew up. "What the hell do you call this? Don't you know I spent much more in buying trousers for the performance?" He went on at some length, with verbal embroidery, and finally threatened to "wring Joyce's bloody neck and chuck him down the stairs."

Joyce merely said: "That is not language that should be used in a government office." The next day he wrote the Consul-General demanding an apology in 24 hours otherwise he would bring suit for threatened assault.

Behind the suit was Joyce's idea of consular functions and powers. "These people look upon themselves as representatives of the king, and expect me to go to them cap in hand. But I look upon them as functionaries who are paid by my father in Dublin to look after my interest while I am abroad. I think mine is the sounder conception in law. What?"

But though the case was finally brought into court, and two of the three points decided in Joyce's favor, the consular gentleman and a vital witness both left town and Joyce was faced with court costs of 120 francs. He refused to pay. Finally 40 francs were taken from him. When the news of the dispute reached America, an editor of the Dial sent Joyce 10,000 francs. Most of this Joyce turned over to the English Players. Then he resigned. He did not want the group to suffer in any way from his association.

* * * *

Budgen's book is a combination of just such anecdotes, such informal glimpses of Joyce, together with a discussion of "Ulysses." Now Budgen will tell of what Joyce did and said while writing a section of the book, now he will expound that section very clear-sightedly. There is no adulation of a "master" to make up queasy. We merely see Joyce as a friend would, hear his laughter, his puns, his sharp observations, his inmost ideas, and learn what he think of "Ulysses" while he was writing it. Budgen tells the story with grace and vigor. In a limited way, he is Joyce's Boswell.

G. O. P. Claims Press Faces New Deal Gag

(Associated Press.)

Press censorship through both legislative and administrative actions were seen by Republican Senators yesterday in pending moves in Congress and under the NRA.

Senator Dickinson, of Iowa, charged in a statement that the "sudden demand of the Administration that all telegraph companies appear Monday to be placed under a new NRA code is the fourth attempt of the Roosevelt Administration to censor the press."

Senator Schall (Republican), Minnesota, asserted in a separate statement the Federal communications bill now before House and Senate Interstate Commerce Committees contained a "new National libel law which can be used to gag the press of the United States."

Sees Gag as Aim.

Dickinson said Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, had "failed to force censorship into the newspaper code" and was now "attempting to secure the same result by forcing a censorship on the telegraph companies conveying the news dispatches to the daily newspapers."

"Only a united front by the press of the Nation can halt this new plan to gag them," he said. "The newspapers of the United States must prevent this fourth attempt to Hitlerize the press of the Nation.

"The recent reaction to the Roosevelt failures, together with Col. Lindbergh's criticism of the air-mail contracts' cancellation, has made the Administration desperate. The Administration knows that unless it can prevent the people from reading of its maladministration there will be revolt this fall at the ballot box.

Charges "Covering Up."

"Their determination to 'cover up' must be blocked. The people of the United States are entitled to know the truth about what is happening in Washington."

Schall said the language of the communications bill was "so ambigous" as to make possible the construction that it contained a "National libel law."

"Of course," he said, "since it is necessary for a telegraph company to secure a license from this commission before it can operate, this in itself, since the license is revokable, is censorship in every sense of the word."

Ritchie at the Cross Roads

Maryland Governor to Choose Soon on Fight for Reelection or Senate Race; Party Leaders and Friends Urge Him Each Way.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Marylanders have found a new pasttime this spring, just as thrilling as playing the races. It is speculating and betting on whether Gov. Albert C. Ritchie will seek a fifth term at Annapolis or try for a seat in the United States Senate.

It is settled he will do one or the other. He has no intention of retiring to private life. But which course he will follow, it may be said authoritatively, remains uncertain. The question will be answered within the next few weeks, however.

Gov. Ritchie is scheduled to return to Maryland Wednesday from a 10-day vacation at the South Carolina estate of Bernard M. Baruch, New York financier and leading figure in the Democratic party. The Governor went there for a much-needed rest and to think carefully over the problems of what future political course he should pursue.

When he returns his mind may be made up, although, for strategical reasons, he may wish to keep his decision secret for some days. It may be said, however, that when he left for the Baruch estate he was uncertain as to what he would do.

Many Factors to Weigh.

This was not because Gov. Ritchie is a man if indecision, but because many factors enter into the determination of his course which are outside of his own personal inclinations. In respect to the latter, Mr. Ritchie would like to be Governor for another term and would like to go on as Governor indefinitely.

The Governor's dilemma has been caused by the conflicting viewpoints of his political lieutenants and his personal friends as to which course would be the better both for Ritchie personally and for the welfare of the Democratic party in Maryland.

When Gov. Ritchie completes his present term—his fourth consecutive term in the Annapolis State House—he will have served a total of 15 years. Before him, no man had ever been re-elected Governor of Maryland—the Bill of Rights in the State's constitution frowns on long continuance in the office.

Although Gov. Ritchie's long term in office has been made an issue each time he ran, he was elected each time by a majority larger than before. But now even some of his closest friends not active in politics take the view that someone else should have a chance at the chair.

He Shares Thought.

The Governor is fully cognizant of this feeling and in large part shares it. Desirous of remaining in public life, he now is afforded a chance to go to the Senate, which, four years hence, may not be available.

The opening afforded him is the expiration of the term of Senator Phillips Lee Goldsborough, a Republican, carried into office on the Hoover landslide of 1928. The Democrats are confident that with Ritchie as their candidate the unseating of Goldsborough would be an easy task.

If the Governor defers the Senate contest for four years, he would have to run, barring unforseen events, against Senator Millard E. Tydings, a Democrat. Such a contest might split the Democratic party and assure the election of a Republican.

So, leaving out all other considerations, it appears that the wise course for Gov. Ritchie would be to seek election to the Senate now. He has given careful consideration to that possibility and some weeks ago was inclined distinctly in that direction.

But when he mentioned this to some of his party leaders, they, especially those in Baltimore, argued against it. They pointed out that such a step on Ritchie's part would necessitate the finding of a candidate for Governor and that the strongest candidate in the field—not formally—was Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore.

The leaders of the political organizations in Baltimore, which have always loyally supported Ritchie, with one or two exceptions, have been hostile to Jackson in recent years. His second-term election as mayor in 1931 was due to a series of tactical blunders on their part and to their inability to solidify their strength behind another candidate.

Fear Loss of Power.

These Baltimore Democratic leaders, whose organizations have been built with patronage from the Ritchie administration, fear that Mayor Jackson, if elected governor, would undermine their strength. This feeling in part is shared by some of the Ritchie lieutenants, who dominate the Democratic machine in all but two or three counties of the State.

Gov. Ritchie feels he owes an obligation to these political leaders who have worked to elect him to four terms. It has been suggested to these anti-Jackson factions that they get together on a Democratic candidate for Governor. But so far they have been unable to agree. It is believed such action is required to stop Jackson, if Ritchie runs for the Senate.

Many of the Governor's lieutenants have urged him to run for a fifth term, as a result of this situation. They have told him that, despite the mutterings heard everywhere against a fifth term, a majority of the State's Democrats are for him for any office he seeks. They have insisted that he could defeat Mayor Jackson in a primary contest in all parts of the State, except on the Eastern Shore, where feeling is still bitter toward Ritchie because of his handling of the Princess Anne lynching affair.

Incidentally, the hostile feeling which was apparent in many counties of the Western Shore when Gov. Ritchie sent troops to arrest the alleged Princess Anne lynchers, has almost disappeared. It still exists on the Eastern Shore, but the voting strength in that section is not sufficient to make much difference in the outcome of a Statewide contest.

G. O. P. Strife-Ridden.

As for Ritchie's prospects for reelection, once he has been renominated, his lieutenants have told him they are of the best. They point out that the Republican party, with three major and two minor candidates for the gubernatorial nomination already in the field, is torn by factional warfare and jealousy, is leaderless and will be unable to present a solid front in the final election.

On the other hand, some others of the Governor's political supporters are uneasy about the result of any attempt to get a fifth term. It is their contention that Mayor Jackson is popular and that should he be denied, either by Ritchie running again or by the Ritchie organization putting another candidate into the field, it would drive many Democrats away from the party candidates, thus jeopardizing Ritchie's unbroken line of victories.

This represents the highlights of the political situation in Maryland at this time. Anyone who wishes to place a bet on what Gov. Ritchie will do may pick his side and pay his money, but such an action is as much a gambling venture as betting on the turn of the wheel at Monte Carlo.

Livestock Cooperatives Show Business Gains

The Cooperative Division of the Farm Credit Administration reported yesterday that cooperative livestock marketing associations of the country handled 13,700,000 head of livestock valued at $135,000,000 during 1933, according to the Associated Press.

This represented an increase of about 1,000,000 head over the 1932 figure and an increased value of approximately $7,000,000. The number of hogs and calves handled increased during the year. Fewer sheep were handled and in general a smaller number of animals were purchased on order.

McLeod Frozen Bank Asset Bill Gains Support

Measure Would Release Billion by Payment Through RFC.

(Associated Press.)

More than a score of members of the House are expected to appear before a banking and currency subcommittee today to urge passage of the McLeod bill to permit the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to pay off depositors in closed National banks.

McLeod said he had already been assured of the support of more than 100 members.

Frozen deposits in closed National banks, and all members of the Federal Reserve System, that would be released under the proposed act have been estimated at more than $1,000,000,000. McLeod said $352,000,000 would be distributed in Michigan alone.

"According to the latest statistics available, Michigan now has 48 National banks in the hands of receivers and 18 National banks in conservatorships, without counting State member banks of the Federal Reserve System," McLeod said.

Aside from Michigan the principal interest that has been expressed in the McLeod bill has come from Ohio, particularly Cleveland. Three Ohio representatives—Bolton, Jenkins and Fletcher—have asked to appear before the committee.

"To thaw out these frozen savings would do more than any other single possible action to restore normalcy," McLeod said. "We in Detroit and throughout the great industralized State of Michigan have felt the disastrous effects of the bank closings with a harshness and severity econd to no other section of the country."

William Green, president of the American Federal of Labor, also has informed McLeod he would support the measure as a step towards rehabilitation of business.

Endocrines Still Studied.

Study of the endocrines, or ductless glands, continues to be the subject of concentrated effort and won honors for scientists in the magazine's list.

Among the students of encephalitis, Drs. Charles Armstrong, of Washington, D. C.; Harold McCordock and Ralph S. Muckenfuss, both of St. Louis, and Ralph Webster, of New York, won mention for their work.

French End Conquest Of Moroccan Interior

Agadir, French Morocco, March 18 (U.P.).—Liaison troops between two French columns completing the penetration of Morocco, met today in the foothills of the Bani Mountains, after having occupied 7,000 square miles formerly held by native tribes.

The surrender of Belkagem and Merrebi Rebo, two of the greatest native chiefs, leaves the French free passage to the Atlantic. The entire occupation campaign was expected to be completed before extreme heat in the desert drives the troops toward the sea or into the hills.

1 Foot Forced Move Is Ruled As Kidnaping

Death Provided Under New California Law if Victim Is Hurt.

Los Angeles, March 18 (AP).—Superior Judge Charles W. Fricke started something when he ruled recently that a person who drags or forces another to move only one foot distance with the intent of forcibly detaining the victim may be held guilty of kidnaping under a new California law.

The new kidnaping law provides a death penalty if the victim is injured, or life-imprisonment if the abducted person does not suffer bodily harm.

Judge Fricke's ruling was pronounced in the cases of William Tanner and Harry Brooks, both of whom have been sentenced to hang for the kidnaping-torture robbery of Henry Bodkin, lawyer, in his home December 16. Testimony at the trial showed the robbers forced Bodkin from one room to another and burned his feet to make him tell the hiding place of $1,700 worth of jewelry.

Since that time a veritable barrage of kidnaping complaints has issued from the district attorney's office in robbery and other alleged criminal offenses, where the asserted victim or victims have been forcibly moved or injured.

The district attorney also filed kidnaping charges against William Johnson and Edward Van as a result of the alleged robbery of Miss Margaret Grove and her Negro maid. The bandits, investigators reported, beat Miss Grove and forced her to walk to her automobile, parked near her home, to obtain her purse.

James O'Connell, 28, unemployed cook, faced possibility of a life sentence because he assertedly kidnaped Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Stubbs in their automobile, forcing them to drive him to a gasoline service station and to aid him in a robbery.

Reich Army Chief Praises War Spirit

Berlin, March 18 (AP).—Lieut. Gen. Werner von Blomberg, commander of the First Reichswehr Division, told army men today that the spirit of the old Imperial Army has been resurrected in the Reichswehr since the advent of Chancellor Hitler.

Speaking to old army regulators at a huge meeting in the Sportspalast, he said, "the spirit of true comradeship that permeated German World War forces, the spirit of sacrifice and of loyalty, has risen again to become a living force among our people."

Cornered after a hunt of many months, Largo was slain when he attempted to shoot his way to safety.

Reed Assails Kansas City's Reform Ticket

Former Senator Scores Ewing Mitchell in Election Drive.

Kansas City, March 18 (AP).—The voice of James A. Reed, declaring Kansas City "is no more boss-ridden than any other city," was added today to the Democratic administration's drive for reinstatement at the municipal election March 27.

The former Missouri Senator, making his first speech of the campaign, praised T. J. Pendergast, Democratic boss named frequently by the fusionist opposition as the head of a "little Tammany" government here.

"If Tom Pendergast is responsible for this administration," Reed said, "then I say he is a real benefactor. I have seen alleged reform movements come and go, and without exception they have never given this city a good administration."

Mayor Bryce B. Smith, Baking Corporation executive, is seeking reelection. Opposing him on a fusionist ticket is Dr. A. Ross Hill, realty man and former president of the University of Missouri.

A fusionist meeting heard Frederick E. Whitten, candiddate for the city council, declare virtual control of the election board rested with John Lazia, North Side Democratic leader. Whitten said "a group of armed gorillas" was supporting Lazia.

Reed, who has criticized the National Democratic Administration in some aspects of the National recovery program, said he did not "even intend to mention" Ewing Y. Mitchell, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, who has assailed the municipal government as under the dominance of Pendergast, concrete and whisky wholesaler.

"When that man is in town," Reed said, "take your nose in your hand and walk away."

Reed asserted Kansas City "has balanced its budget, and its credit stands so high that its bonds command a premium," while "Cleveland is paying its employes in scrip, and many other cities are staggering along the edge of bankruptcy."

Reich Press Hints Nation Will Arm In Spite of France

Berlin, March 18 (AP).—If France rejects Germany's most recent arms reply, said the newspaper Boersen Zeitung today, Germany must act "to insure her most primitive needs of self-defense."

"France," the paper said, "must show its true colors. Its era of evasion and sabotage has come to an end. We expect France to accept Germany's minimum proposal.

"If such a reply is not forthcoming, or if France bluntly refuses, then there remains only—even without France's approval—for Germany to do what her honor demands and what England and Italy consider justified."

Other papers offerer similar comment.

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

Blackie Takes a Rest

WHEN Blackie got home that night after pulling Mr. Man's wagon all the afternoon, and then giving Billie Possum such a fast ride, he was mighty tired and hot, and so he crawled into his bed, or the place where his bed had been, without any supper.

Next morning when he woke he was so sore and stiff that he just couldn't walk. He had lain on the ground all night because he had given Billie Possum his bed, and sleeping on the hard cold ground wasn't good for such tired and sore bones as Blackie had, so he was in a pretty bad fix.

Away along about dinner time Blackie managed to crawl to the door where he thought maybe he could see Chatter Squirrel or Jay Bird, and get him to go for Dr. Coon to come and rub his stiff legs with some liniment, and get him so he could walk.

The doctor came in a great hurry.

He sat in his door for a long time without seeing a soul, and then he heard somebody saying, "Jay, Jay, Jay," and he knew his friend Jay Bird was coming. When Jay Bird saw the fix Blackie was in he was awfully worried, and wanted to know what had happened, but Blackie told him there was no time to talk, but would he please hurry over to Dr. Coon's house and tell him to get his medicine chest and come over as fast as he could.

Sleeps All Day.

You know Dr. Coon sleeps all day, and he had been out all the night before, and so he was fast asleep when Jay Bird got there. Jay Bird pecked and pecked on the door, and then had to call him two or three times before he woke Dr. Coon up.

The Doctor didn't know what was the matter with Blackie, and so he had to take along all sorts of medicine so he would have the right kind, and it took him a good while to get ready, which was well enough for Blackie, for, after Jay Bird had gone Blackie found that he needed to do some fixing, too. What sort of a story was he going to tell the Doctor about how he got in this fix?

He had to think and work fast. Something had to be done to fool Dr. Coon, no matter how much the doing made Blackie's bones ache, so he rolled down his steps and kept on rolling and scratching up the dirt to make it look like there had been a big fight all over the place.

Then he crawled back and sat on the step to wait for the Doctor. It wasn't long before Dr. Coon came running up, and he asked Blackie what his trouble was. Blackie told him that last night while he was asleep three great big tigers came to his house and called him out like they wanted to talk with him, telling him that they were friends of Jocko Monkey.

Tigers Jump Out.

When he opened the door, two of the tigers jumped on him and started to fight, while the other one went in his house and stole his sheep-skin bed and ran away with it. He said that he whipped the other two tigers, but it was such hard work that it made him so sore he couldn't walk.

Dr. Coon felt mighty sorry for Blackie, and he got some liniment out of his medicine chest and rubbed his stiff legs good, and then he got some bear grass from down on the creek, and made some good hot tea. And he had thought from what Jay Bird told him that Blackie might not have much to eat, and so he brought half of a chicken that he had caught last night.

Then Dr. Coon told Blackie to lie down and sleep all day and night, and he would come over to see him again tomorrow. And he told Jay Bird to stay around, and not let anybody wake Blackie till the next morning.

Spring Days Fill Society Lists Here

Florida Visitors Coming Home as Winter Slowly Wanes.

Luncheons and Teas Are Outstanding Events Scheduled.

Now that spring is here, even though there still remains a threat of winter in the air, Capital society is returning home from the sunny beaches of Florida, the gay activities at Aiken, S. C., and the ever fascinating winter sports at Lake Placid, and the social calendars are steadily filling up with luncheons, dinners and teas.

One of the first of the spring teas was the attractively appointed one given yesterday afternoon by Mr. and Mrs. Eugene R. Woodson and their daughter, Miss Jean Woodson, in honor of Miss Ruth Farrar, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Farrar, of Houston, Tex., who is a student at Holton Arms School this year.

The drawing rooms of the Woodson home on Klingle road were artistically decorated with clusters of gay spring flowers, and lighted by the mellow glow of tall ivory tapers. The tea table had a centerpiece of rose tulips, dark red, white and blue iris and white spring blossoms arranged in a base of deep green ferns.

Mrs. Woodson, her daughter, and their guest of honor, received their guests, standing before a background lavishly banked with pastel shaded flowers.

Mrs. Woodson was wearing a handsome gown of heavy cream-colored lace, made on graceful lines, the full skirt shirred into a V in the front. The sleeves were made of wired puffs of the lace, and the belt, of matching ribbon, was caught by a buckle of varicolored brilliants. She wore a corsage of dark red roses.

Miss Woodson's frock was of black moss crepe. Its becoming lines were fitted to the knees and flaring from there out into a full skirt, the train of which was lined with silver. The close-fitting sleeves were open at the shoulders, with small pointed "turn-backs" of the silver. A corsage of ivory gardenias was fastened at one side.

Miss Farrar was costumed in black mousseline de soie. Her frock was made with a full ruffled skirt and a brief capelet of ruffles. She also wore a cluster of gardenias.

Those who assisted Miss Woodson were Miss Kathleen Carter, of Spartanburg, S. C.; Miss Ruth Laura Lyon, of Durham, N. C.; Miss Dorothy Dial and Miss Nancy Berry, of Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander B. Legare have left Mountain Lake Park where they spent the past six weeks and have gone to Charleston, S. C., where they will remain until the end of March.

Winchester, Va., March 18 (Spl.). Thirty-two girls' schools in Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and the District of Columbia have been requested by Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival authorities here to name princesses for the court of the blossom queen at the 1934 fete.

Speculation has been rife for some time that the queen may be chosen from a South American country in order to cement further friendship with Latin-Americans who have become large buyers of apples.

Director General J. P. Arthur has called a mass meeting of the citizens of Winchester for next Thursday night. Plans for the festival will be discussed. Representatives of railroads, steamship companies and bus lines handling apples for the export and domestic market are expected to be present.

Fragrance Adds Happier Touch To Men's Lotions

By Ruth Anne Davis.

A woman who went shopping the other day to buy a lot of new things for herself came home with an armful of parcels for her husband.

It was purely unintentional. Usually she lets her husband shop for himself. But while standing at a counter selecting some perfume, she noticed a number of men's toilet articles which she couldn't resist. There was shaving soap, with a delicate lavender fragrance which came in an an attractive bone bowl.

And then there was an after-shave lotion, and talcum in attractive glass bottles designed with midway indentions for a firm grip. That was a coincidence. She remembered a catastrophe a morning or so ago when the hurried, man of the house had no sooner grabbed a bottle of lotion than it slipped from his soapy hands. Glass and lotion all over the floor! Piping hot words in the air!

A bottle of eau de cologne was too much for her. It too, had that clean, refreshing lavender scent that she loved. She made sure that its fragrance was so subtle and illusive that even her husband, who turned up his nose at the idea of a man's perfume couldn't possibly take exception to it.

So home she went with these parcels. By 6 o'clock she had begun to worry—maybe she shouldn't have bought these things. Maybe he wouldn't like them! But when she viewed the bathroom shelf, cluttered up with the old assortment of bottles and jars, she resolved that, whether he liked it or not, the pretty new things were going to take the place of these.

Six o'clock came and went. Her husband arrived. And, she says, he was as delighted as a child over all his brand new equipment!

These articles are available in a local shop.

Help for a Good Mixer.

One of the newest and most popular books is establishing a precedent for itself. Without a single love scene or murder, without one line of conversation—without a plot, in fact, it's appealing to hundreds of men and women.

A delightful black leather binding is engraved with the name, "A Bartender's Friend," and the author "A. Mixer." A short notice inside says that it is "a compilation of the best in mixology from reliable sources, both new and old, and particularly from the formulary of the famous old Grand Opera House bar, Syracuse, N. Y."

Some Doggy Matchboxes.

An F street shop which manages to surprise innumerable shoppers every week with new kinds of novelties has on display today some odd little matchboxes. They're the handy size that allows them to be strewn over tables and stands without cluttering up the room. These, while they're the usual matchbox cardboard, have chenille dogs perched across the top.

And such dogs! Some are standing on their hind legs. Others on their heads, some look as though they were in the middle of a somersault. One glance means a sure grin.

Boys Will Watch Out.

As long as the new Scout watch is wound up and running the Boy Scout will be reminded with every tick that it's up to him to live up to the Scout creed. Against a woodsy background, the large hand inscribed with "A Scout is—" moves from number to number. Back of each number is neatly printed words such as "thrifty," "kind," "cheerful" and other such reminders of the Scout ethics. At five minutes after the hour the boy reads, "A Scout is clean." At ten minutes after, he sees that a Scout is "cheerful." The little second hand made in the shape of the emblem scurries around the small second dial.

These watches may be bought in wrist or pocket style, for a very reasonable sum.

Laugh Them Off Dry.

The monogrammed suede card table covers on sale in a downtown department store have more to recommend them than their appearance. In the first place, suede makes an ideal surface for card playing. While it's smooth, at the same time it's proof against cards slipping and sliding all over the place. Secondly, this suede is gloriously water-proof. What a relief if a careless guest turns over his highball or cocktail to actually be able to laugh it off and mean it when you say, "Oh, that's nothing. I'm sure it won't stain!" Price 78 cents.

Young Lady in the Dark.

Dear Miss Davis: Do you think a young girl looks much older when she wears black? I work, and I find black my best stand-by, yet I don't wish to look older than I am.

ELIZABETH.

Dear Elizabeth: The girl who works is wise indeed to have at least one black suit or dress in her wardrobe. There is no danger that black will make her look older if she relieves it with white or colored collars, cuffs and bows this season.

Half-Forgotten Romances of American History

Mark Twain—Olivia Langdon

Picture Inspired Love for Couple Devoted Throughout Life.

By Elisabeth E. Poe.

"Love is the bridge between the human and the divine." The speaker was a distinguished looking man whose shock of white hair, sea-blue eyes, glowing countenance and immaculate all-white costume matching the snows of a January day would have singled him out from his fellows in any company.

It was Mark Twain, visiting Washington a few years before his death. He had come to the Capital to fight for better copyright protection for his fellow authors. His appearance, clad all in white in midwinter in the halls of Congress, was the signal for a near-riot of legislators anxious to get within earshot of the great American humorist and philosopher.

Twain had granted an interview to discuss Edgar Allen Poe, one of his literary enthusiasms. In that interview he uttered his now famous pronouncement that no author can be sure of fame until he has been dead for 100 years. Somehow the talk had veered to romance and love, and the old man's eyes sparkled as in youth when he recalled his own heart story, his adoration for and love of lovely Olivia Langdon, a picture that came to life for him.

Rustic Missouri Origins.

As he sat there and ran lightly over his life story with priceless comments on outstanding incidents, it was not hard to picture him in the various periods of his career. Mark Twain was the eternal boy, the same boy that he has immortalized in "Tom Sawyer," "Huckleberry Finn" and that less publicized book, "The Prince and the Pauper." Without formal education, Mark Twain, whose real name was Samuel Langhorne Clemens, rose from the ranks of poor Missouri boys to a place among the great and good of the world. Life itself was his book, and a mighty good book for him it proved to be. In his home, his father, a happy-go-lucky storekeeper and local Daniel, so to speak, popularly known as "Judge" Clemens, was something of a philosopher in homespun. That was good training, too, for little Sam's future work.

The family moved to Hannibal, Mo., when Sam was 4 years old. Eight years later Judge Clemens died, leaving little besides a good name to his wife and children. Sam was a husky lad anxious to help, and so he became a printer's devil on his brother's paper, the Hannibal Journal. A love for printer's ink never left him. He learned to set type, and became a journeyman printer, roaming the Midwest and even the East as far as Philadelphia and New York before he was 19.

Every printer of the old days, as well as every reporter, carried an unfinished novel in his knapsack, and Sam was no exception to the general rule. But his boyish fancy was fixed on becoming a Mississippi River pilot, and back he came to the great Father of Waters to "learn the river" and, as he wrote in his "Life on the Mississippi," getting personally and familiarly acquainted "with all the different types of human nature that are to be found in fiction, biography, or history."

The Civil War came on apace and it ended the river trade. Sam Clemens' eyes turned Westward. His brother, Orion, had been appointed Lieut. Governor of Nevada and Sam went with him to his new post. Clemens then in turn took up gold mining and journalism on the Virginia City Enterprise where he first coined the sobriquet, "Mark Twain," and went to San Francisco as one of the golden company that included Artemus Ward, Charles Warren Stoddard, Bret Harte and Orpheus C. Ker. He next published the "Celebrated Jumping Frog of Calaveras County," which made him famous over night.

Perhaps it was that his mother, Jane Lampton, whose father was descended from Virginia stock, was a presumptive heir to an English title and estate that in 1867 turned Mark Twain's thoughts to foreign travel. The San Francisco Alta California agreed to publish a series of foreign travel letters and he set sail for Europe. The result was "Innocents Abroad," which when published had a prodigious sale and Mark Twain quickly became the most widely read author in the United States.

This ocean voyage did more than win him literary fame, however. It won him a wife as well.

On the trip he met a young man, a certain Langdon, of Elmira, N. Y. They became fast friends and Langdon showed him a miniature of his sister, Olivia. Twain promptly fell in love with the pictured face and encouraged the brother to talk of his pretty sister.

When New York was reached Langdon and Twain parted but not until Twain had promised to visit him in Elmira. There the Langdons were important people. Olivia was lovely in face and character. She was well read, was a great admirer of Twain's works, was quite the belle of the little town, now much more of a city than it was in the late sixties.

The flame of romance, ignited by the sight of Olivia's picture, burned higher when Mark and Olivia met face to face. Romance had passed him by during his bachelorhood. Singularly enough, there never was but the one romance in his life—that with Olivia Langdon.

Olivia must have found the literary stranger very fascinating, for soon the beaux who had swarmed about dropped away at the sight of Mark's leadership in the field of romance. The girl's father wanted to delay until Mark gave up some of his Bohemian habits and settled down from his wanderings. Eager to marry Olivia, Mark Twain consented to give up the nomadic life, and in 1870 they were married at her father's home in Elmira and went to Hartford to live.

Clemens Gladly Forsook Bohemian Wanderings for His Bride.

He had bartered it all for domestic delights, and gladly. Thirty-four years their marriage lasted, in which time Mark's fame increased as well as his earnings. Publishing ventures were costly, however.

In 1891 Twain went abroad to gather material for "Joan of Arc," which he was 14 years in writing. It is one of the most pretentious of all his writings. He was fascinated by the career of the Maid of Orleans, and he once told his wife, always his closest confidant and best literary critic, that it meant more to him than anything he had ever undertaken.

Anonymous Book.

Fearing that the public would not take it seriously over his signature, he published it anonymously. He paid off his debts by indulging once more in his wanderlust in a journey around the world, taking Olivia with him, and which resulted in "Following the Equator."

The dawn of the twentieth century saw the Twains settled in New York. They were happy in their home and their children, one of whom, Clara Clemens, is now living, the only one of his four daughters to survive him. She is the wife of the pianist and conductor, Ossip Gabrilowitsch, and herself a singer and writer of renown.

Four years later came the end of the romance. Mrs. Twain died and the "memory of her sweetness was all he had of her." It is said that he would sit in front of the miniature which had brought them together for hours and muse, undisturbed by others who knew what agony her loss had meant to him.

Before she died, they had gone to his old haunts in Missouri together and received a royal welcome from the State proud of its distinguished native son.

In 1906 Twain built a country house, Stormfield, at Redding, Conn., which became a Mecca for literary folk from all corners of the earth. There, surrounded by his beloved books, his flowers and his devoted daughters, Twain received them, always a perfect host.

Another crushing blow came on him in 1909 in the death of his daughter, Jean. One of the tenderest tributes ever penned by a father to the memory of a child was written by him in her memory. He let go of life, really, with her passing.

America and the world mourned when the news flashed over the wires that the prince of wit and humor and a true modern philosopher was dead on April 21, 1910. The tender smile on his lips after death seemed to proclaim that the picture of Olivia Langdon had once more become a reality beyond the skies.

With Prohibition Out, Cheese Returns to Popular Favor as an Accompaniment to Cocktails.

By Susan Mills.

The country is becoming cheese-minded. This may be due to the fact that prohibition is out, and cocktails are in. As an accompaniment for liquor, cheese is unsurpassed.

Rouquefort, particularly, adds zest to a stein of beer, or as a canape, makes any sparkling cocktail a real treat. Men like its tangy flavor, women, its piquancy.

The two following recipes are delightful and entirely appropriate in their particular uses. The first is a cocktail accompaniment, the second explains itself.

Cheese Canapes.

(12 portions, 24 canapes)
8 ounces Roquefort cheese
4 ounces mayonnaise
4 ounces butter
½ stalk minced celery

Strain the Roquefort cheese through a sieve; cream the cheese with the butter; season with salt and pepper and put on toasted round shapes of bread. Cover with celery mixed with mayonnaise and garnish with sliced gherkins.

Midnight Frolic Sandwich.

4 slices rye bread
2 ounces caviar
1 tomato
2 ounces Roquefort cheese
2 hard-boiled eggs

Serve open. Arrange on one slice of bread, half the cheese and half the sliced tomato. On the other slice arrange half the caviar and half the hard-boiled egg. Garnish with olives, pickles and chopped onion.

In seeking the tasteful and appropriate tidbit for the midnight snack one need not look farther than the icebox. Grab the bacon, and the cheese, and a couple of tomatoes and your problem is solved.

Cheese and Bacon Grill.

8 slices bread
½-pound package American cheese, grated
Prepared mustard
8 slices tomato
8 slices bacon

Toast bread on one side. On untoasted side place grated cheese, mustard, slice of tomato and bacon. Place under broiler about 6 minutes and allow cheese to melt and bacon to become crisp.

What Today Means

"Pisces."

If March 19 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 7:30 to 8:30 a. m., from 1:30 to 2:30 p. m. and from 5:30 to 6:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 9:30 to 10:30 a. m., from 3:30 to 4:30 p. m. and from 8:30 to 9:30 p. m.

If March 19 is your natal day, it might be advisable to curb any tendency you may have to overindulge in frivolity. None of us can afford to burn the candle day and night for candles cost money, and the candlemaker exacts his pay. "The Great White Ways" of all cities are only profitable for the people who offer their wares and amusements to the pleasure seeker. A happy, carefree and generous disposition is a blessing, so long as one keeps it under the control of common sense. Extravagance and waste of either money or vitality always results in a painful day of reckoning, so it is a wise man or woman, who avoids contracting such an obligation, which eventually they have to pay. Moderation is the most satisfactory medium through which to secure real pleasure and wholesome recreation.

The child born on March 19, as it grows up, must have impressed on it how very important an education is today. It is only fair to the child that it is made to realize the necessity for it to properly apply itself to its studies. Let it learn that inattention is simply a habit and that it must concentrate on whatever is happening or being discussed. It is very easy to teach a child not to let its attention wander away into vague and distant space, if from infancy it is taught the power of concentration.

The woman born on March 19 will be happier if she learns not to be discontented with what she has. Envy is purely a mental state, which creates discordant thoughts. Many a woman in gorgeous surroundings and possessing beautiful clothes would willingly exchange all for a simple home, where love and peace exists. A mind free of care, a clear conscience, and unsullied love are treasures mere money cannot buy, and possessions that should make anyone having them grateful and gratified.

The man born on March 19 will do well to remember that money cannot buy friendship or love. You will find that you can have numerous true, unselfish friends and loyal love, without making lavish expenditures. Only self-centered insincere and mercenary people allow money to be an influencing factor, where friendship or love is involved.

People born on March 19 must learn not to be subjects of the "Green-Eyed Goddess," and to throw off her yoke. Nature has been most lavish with her endowments to the people born on this date, so be grateful for the numerous excellent attributes you possess.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Tastes in Water.

Water containing sewage is very dangerous. It often causes epidemics of typhoid fever and of diarrheas. Fortunately, not many people are now exposed to badly sewage laden water, and in consequence epidemics of these diseases are infrequent. The next generation will know almost nothing of typhoid and other water-borne diseases.

But, water that is only moderately polluted with sewage is not objectionable to the taste or smell. In the old days there were wells and springs that were noted for the sweetness of their waters. They were in usual demand because of their attractive flavors. Analyses showed that most of these sweet waters were polluted, a few of them dangerously, and it was the pollution that gave them their attractive flavors.

Chlorination, filtration, and holding in reservoirs—measures that have proved valuable in making water safe for drinking purposes—not infrequently are responsible for tastes and odors that take away thirst. The proportion of chlorine that is needed to kill typhoid and diarrhea bacilli is so very small it rarely can be recognized by taste or smell.

Last winter at Buffalo for a few days the sewage was held back by ice, and, in order to protect the citizens of cities down the river, it became necessary to use excessive amounts of chlorine for the time. There was complaint from these cities of the chlorine in their water supply. Part of the complaint was justified, though some of it was due to phenol bodies poured into the water from certain industrial plants. Most objections to the taste of chlorinated water are based on the presence of these phenols due to trade waste rather than to the chlorine itself.

Much of the disagreeable taste of safe waters is due to algae and other plankton. These are plants of low order growing in water and wet places along the banks or walls, growing better, as a rule, in clean, fairly pure water than in that which is badly polluted with sewage. The farmer knows algae as the green growth in his horse trough and in and around his ponds.

Growth of algae serves a useful purpose, and always has, but making water more attractive in appearance and flavor is not a contribution to that end. Algae contain considerable fats and oils, and wind readily causes them to break away and spoil the water. The plants grow rapidly and die in great quantities and the decomposition products are offensive to smell and taste. In a few instances stock have been poisoned by drinking waters badly polluted by some of the algae.

In great industrial centers with many coke ovens the phenols from trade waste are the principal cause of unpleasant tastes and odors in the public water supplies. Chlorination is a poor second. Growth of algae ranks even lower. In smaller cities and those without great industries of certain kinds growth of algae rank first. One method of preventing this growth is by keeping the water in the dark. Another is by treating the water with copper solution.

The Dragon Murder Case —By S. S. Van Dine.

Just then a door slammed noisily somewhere at the rear of the house, and heavy footsteps crossed the front hall and approached the drawing room. Detective Hennessey appeared at the door, his mouth partly open and his eyes protruding with excitement.

He greeted Markham perfunctorily and turned quickly to the sergeant.

"Something's happened down there at the pool," he announced, jerking his thumb over his shoulder. "I was standing by the springboard like you told me to do, smoking a cigar, when I heard a funny rumbling noise up at the top of the rock cliff opposite. And pretty soon there was a hell of a splash in the pool—sounded like a ton of bricks had been dumped off the cliff into the water. * * * I waited a coupla minutes to see if anything else'd happen, and then I thought I'd better come up and tell you."

"Did you see anything?" demanded Heath, aggressively.

"Nary a thing, sergeant." Hennessey spoke with emphasis. "It's dark over there by the rocks, and I didn't go round over the filter ledge, because you told me to keep off that low stretch at the other end."

"I told him to keep off," the sergeant explained to Markham, "because I wanted to go over that ground again for footprints in the daylight tomorrow." Then he turned back to Hennessey. "Well, what do you think the noise was?" he asked with the gruffness of exasperation.

"I'm not thinking," Hennessey retorted. "I'm simply tellin' you all I know."

Leland rose and took a step toward the sergeant.

Rocks Loosened.

"If you will pardon me, I think I can offer a reasonable explanation of what this man heard in the pool. Several large pieces of rock at the top of the cliff are loosened where the strata overlap, and I have always had a fear that one of them might come crashing down into the pool. Only this morning Mr. Stamm and I went up to the top of the bluff and inspected those rocks. In fact, we even attempted to pry one of them loose, but could not do so. It is quite possible that the heavy rain tonight may have dislodged the earth that was holding it."

Vance nodded.

"At least that explanation is a pleasin' bit of rationality," he observed lightly.

"Maybe so, Mr. Vance," Heath conceded reluctantly. Hennessey's tale had disturbed him. "But what I want to know is why it should happen on this particular night."

"As Mr. Leland has told us, he and Mr. Stamm attempted to pry the rock loose today—or should I say yesterday? Perhaps they did loosen it, and that would account for its having shifted and fallen after the rain."

"Go back and take up your post," he ordered. "If anything else happens down at the pool, hop up here and report pronto."

Hennessey disappeared — reluctantly, I thought.

Markham had sat through the entire proceedings with an air of tolerant boredom. He had taken only a mild interest in Vance's questioning, and when Hennessey had left us he got to his feet.

The Doctor.

"Just what is the point in all this discussion, Vance?" he asked irritably. "The situation is normal enough. Admittedly it has certain morbid angles, but all of this esoteric stuff seems to me the result of nerves. Every one's on edge, and I think the best thing for us to do is to go home and let the sergeant handle the matter in the routine way. How could there be anything premeditated in connection with Montague's possible death when he himself suggested going swimming and then dived off the springboard and disappeared while every one was looking on?"

"My dear Markham," protested Vance, "you're far too logical. It's your legal training, of course. But the world is not run by logic. I infinitely prefer to be emotional.

"Think of the masterpieces of poetry that would have been lost to humanity if their creators had been pure logicians—the Odyssey, for instance, the Ballade des Dames du Temps Jadis, the Divina Commedia, Laus Veneris, the Ode on a Grecian Urn——"

"But what do you propose to do now?" Markham cut in, annoyed.

"I propose," answered Vance, with an exasperating smile, "to inquire of the doctor concerning the condition of our host."

"What could Stamm have to do with it?" protested Markham. "He seems less concerned in the affair than any of the other people here."

Heath, impatient, had risen and started for the door.

"I'll get the doc," he rumbled. And he went out into the dim hallway.

A few minutes later he returned, followed by an elderly man with a closely cropped gray vandyke. He was clad in a black baggy suit with a high, old-fashioned collar several sizes too large for him. He was slightly stout and moved awkwardly; but there was something in his manner that inspired confidence.

Vance rose to greet him, and after a brief explanation of our presence in the house, he said:

"Mr. Leland has just told us of Mr. Stamm's unfortunate condition tonight, and we'd like to know how he's coming along."

Case Is Recounted.

"He's following the normal course," the doctor replied, and hesitated. Presently he went on: "Since Mr. Leland informed you of Mr. Stamm's condition I won't be violating professional ethics in discussing the case with you. Mr Stamm was unconscious when I arrived. His pulse was slow and sluggish, and his breathing shallow. When I learned of the amount of whisky he had taken since dinner I immediately gave him a stiff dose of apomorphine—a tenth of a grain. It emptied his stomach at once, and after the reaction he went back to sleep normally. He had consumed an astonishing amount of liquor—it was one of the worst cases of acute alcoholism I have ever known. He is just waking up now, and I was about to telephone for a nurse when this gentleman"—indicating Heath—"told me you wished to see me."

Vance nodded understandingly.

"Will it be possible for us to talk to Mr. Stamm at this time?"

"A little later, perhaps. He is coming round all right, and, once I get him upstairs to bed, you may see him. . . . But you understand, of course," the doctor added, "he will be pretty weak and played out."

Vance murmured his thanks.

"Will you let us know when it is convenient to have us talk to him?"

The doctor inclined his head in assent.

"Certainly," he said, and turned to go.

"And in the meantime," Vance said to Markham, "I think it might be well to have a brief chat with Miss Stamm. . . . Sergeant, will you produce the young lady for us?"

"Just a moment." The doctor turned in the doorway. "I would ask you, sir, not to disturb Miss Stamm just now. When I came here I found her in a very high-strung, hysterical condition over what had happened.

"So I gave her a stiff dose of bromides and told her to go to bed. She's in no condition to be questioned about the tragedy. Tomorrow, perhaps."

"It really doesn't matter," Vance returned. "Tomorrow will do just as well."

The doctor went lumberingly into the hall, and a moment later we could hear him dialing a number on the telephone.

Chapter IV.
An Interruption.

(Sunday, August 12, 1:35 A. M.)

Markham heaved a deep, annoyed sigh and focused his eyes on Vance in exasperation.

"Aren't you satisfied yet?" he demanded impatiently. "I suggest we get along home."

"Oh, my dead Markham!" Vance protested whimsically, lighting a fresh Regie. "I should never forgive myself if I went without at least making the acquaintance of Mrs. McAdam. My word! Really, now, wouldn't you like to meet her?"

Vance turned to Heath.

"Shepherd the butler in, sergeant."

Heath went out with alacrity, returning immediately with the butler in tow. He was a short, pudgy man in his late fifties, with a smug, round face. His eyes were small and shrewd; his nose flat and concave, and the corners of his mouth were pinched into a downward arc. He wore a blond toupee, which neither fitted him nor disguished the fact that he was bald. His uniform needed pressing, and his linen was far from immaculate; but he had an unmistakable air of pompous superiority.

"I understand your name is Trainor," said Vance.

"Yes, sir."

"Well, Trainor, there seems to be considerable doubt as to just what happened here tonight. That's why the District Attorney and I have come up." Vance's eyes were fixed on the man with appraising interest.

"If I may be permitted to say so, sir," Trainor submitted in a mincing falsetto, "I think your being here is an excellent idea. One never can tell what is behind these mysterious episodes."

Vance lifted his eyebrows.

"So you think the episode mysterious? * * * Can you tell us something that might be helpful?"

"Oh, no, sir." The man elevated his chin haughtily. "I haven't the slightest suggestion to make—thanking you, sir, for the honor of asking me."

Milady's Toes Late Wrinkle In Paris Style

Chiropodist Man of Hour as Bunions Cause Deep Thought.

Paris, March 18 (AP).—Barefoot styles have set a pedicure rage here and given the fashionables something new to worry about.

Since one smart designer launched evening tailleurs worn by mannequins whose stockingless feet were thrust into toeless sandals and scores of other dressmakers show barefoot sandals and very abbreviated bathing suits for the beach, Parisians are becoming "foot minded."

With toes threatening to be prominent this summer, they are "toeing the mark" in a new direction. Pedicures are nearly as much in demand as manicures, and many a smart Parisian is spending hours with her chiropodist which she once devoted to bridge.

No more callouses, no more unshapely heels, no more carelessly filed nails. Softening oils, bleaches and brilliant nail enamel are all brought into play until madame's foot will bear the same scrutiny as her face. Just as a serene face is the watchword since the windswept coiffure breezed into the picture, so a comfortable foot is the slogan where the smart world moves.

Many Feet Cramped.

For years they have worn those short, high-heeled shoes which French women love, but that often led to a cramped, calloused foot. Recently some of them have bought the new lower-heeled shoe now in vogue—and shuddered at the "flat-footed silhouette."

Torn between beauty on the beach and chic on the street, many of them have elected to "stand by their boats" and are wearing lower-heeled shoes.

"This is an athletic age," says one slender beauty with a shrug. "We'll just have to make the best of it."

Pedicures seem less difficult to take and softly-scented foot creams, and bleaches are much used. Sun-tan powders promise to be in vogue this summer. Generally the enamel matches that worn on the finger nails, with the new rose mother of pearl and a brilliant carmine high favorites.

Bells for Toes.

With toes promising to be so much in the summer style scene, some designers are giving new attention to cut-out sandals for both evening and beach wear. Black crepe sandals with nothing at all over the front of the foot and very little more than that behind are shown in one designer's salon as a smart accompaniment for evening clothes.

A shoe designer who wants to call attention to a beautiful foot has designed a beige kidskin sports sandal with bells behind the toes. The toe is cut out, and on the band across the ball of the foot tiny bells jingle like the song "Irish Rose."

Vests Put Pep In Spring Suits

Simple Ones for Tailored Suits, Dressier for Formal Wear.

Spring has arrived spasmodically and departed suddenly several times during the last two or three weeks, leaving women to wonder what to do about the clothes situation—whether to struggle along through warm shopping days arrayed in the old fur coat or to issue forth arrayed more comfortably in last year's spring suit.

If they decide on the suit, the odds are they're in for a few discouraging moments after dragging it out from its winter resting place. Last year's clothes never look quite so well as remembered and always need renovating and perking up.

A good fashion cocktail, something dependable to give the suit some of its old-time dash, is a new blouse. This spring's models fulfill that office especially well.

The waistcoat is a particularly happy version for the young and slim. A white pique one, neatly tailored and very simple, will do wonders. Lots of these are on the market in all sorts of versions, and they are inexpensive to boot.

Other waistcoats, maybe vests is a simpler way to say it, come in checked cottons. Very small and very snappy checks. If the suit in question is a tailored affair it will be able to carry off a hat, simple and sailorish, in the same pattern and material.

Even if the suit is more dressy, some version of the vest may be worked out so the result will be close harmony. Try a more formal material, velveteen, taffeta, or something of the kind. All are being worn, or will be worn, when Washington turns out for its Easter parade.

Grace Episcopal Guild Gathers at Woodside

The Women's Guild of the Grace Episcopal Church, of Woodside, Md., held their monthly meeting Thursday, with communion in the church at 10 a. m. and the business meeting and luncheon at 11 a. m. The speaker was Miss Florence Hyde, educational secretary of the diocese.

Garden Club to Meet.

Purcellville, Va., March 18 (Spl.). The Purcellville Garden Club will meet at the home of Mrs. C. J. Hansbarger, Friday. "Seed Propagation" will be the topic of a discussion by Mrs. M. N. Lyon, of the Leesburg Garden Club, and Miss Caroline Pancoast will discuss "Garden Pests and Remedies."

The strangest thing about her—to many Washingtonians—is that Miss Amy Cook, of South Africa, looks, acts and is much like American girls.

"They are so sure that I'll be different," Miss Cook said, "that I'm probably disappointing."

She's not disappointing, though. When she agreed to tell us a little about herself she was ready to spend an evening with friends in Washington society. Her gown was of black and white striped taffeta, its frilled shoulders becoming to her youthful slimness, as she greeted us in the drawing room of the old Italian Embassy, now the Southern Club.

Clothes, education, sports and ambitions of girls of South Africa are much like those of feminine American life, Miss Cook said. She has been doing secretarial work in Washington for four years.

"We secretaries from my country must know our shorthand in two languages—English and Africans, for everyone in South Africa knows at least those two languages," she said.

* * * *

One of the Cabinet members this week held a press conference at which there was distributed a lengthy and technical statement on a commodity that is decidedly important, politically. The Secretary answered the press men's questions and discussed the situation with them at some length.

Then, referring to the statement distributed, he spoke in glowing terms of its clarity, accuracy and general excellence. When the newspaper men began to grin out loud the Secretary looked more carefully at the statement he had been praising. He found it to be under his own signature.

* * * *

When Ethel Barrymore paid a recent visit to London in "The Twelve-Pound Look," The London Express described her this way:

Witty. When "Moby Dick" was suggested as a picture for brother John said: "There is no love interest in the book, but Hollywood will find a way. I suppose they will have John falling in love with the whale."

Women Poloists Join Men's Meet To Make History

Ramapo Valley and Saxon Woods Teams Play in N. Y. Tourney.

By Ware Torrey and Janet Owen.

Women's polo history was made in New York recently, when, for the first time, the men of the New York Athletic Club invited two women's teams to play in the annual midwinter tournament. The Ramapo Valley team played the Saxon Woods Polo Club team.

Started on Long Island.

Women have played polo here and there for some time, first in Aiken, S. C. and Santa Barbara, Calif., then in Washington, Baltimore and Philadelphia, later still in Asheville, N. C., and Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. Thomas Hitchcock, the chief mentor of women's polo in this country, started a women's team playing on Long Island several years ago; now there are teams around New York City, in Westchester County, the Tuxedo Park section, Ridgewood, N. J., and New York itself.

New Clubs Being Formed.

Clubs are springing up all over the country, and regular schedules of inter-club games are played. It marks a new point of progress however, for women to play in a men's tournament.

The comparative newness of women's polo playing in this country makes the sport seem a novelty. But in the year 590 a polo match was played by the Sultana of Persia and ladies of her court to amuse Khusru Pavez, the Shah.

If Miss Emily Ida Farnum hoped to get away from mobs of people when she left New York and came to Washington, she picked the wrong place—and the wrong job. As personnel officer of the Census Bureau, Miss Farnum probably interviews more persons than any personnel worker in the United States. Her office is in the Commerce Building, shown in the air view in oval.

Wolf and Pigs Popular Subs For Easter Bunnies and Eggs

Under an arbor of pink paper blossoms stood a delightful replica of three houses—one of straw, one of sticks, and one of bricks. Into the delightful setting came a wolf, with a face like a nightmare. Three frightened pigs scurried into the brick house, and the door banged.

The famous Disney characters couldn't have been more realistic in the mind of their originator than they were on the floor of Lansburgh's toy department Saturday morning. The pigs squealed and chortled, tap-danced, and gave exhibitions of extreme terror to a crowd of wide-eyed children. It was all by way of celebrating the coming of Easter.

Fathers held small offspring on their shoulders for better view. Mothers dragged reluctant babes away, saying: "You've seen the show four times. Isn't that quite enough?"

Then, after the show, came a stampede. The pigs, out of character, but still in costume, gave away reproductions of theirs and the wolf's facial idosyncracies. Children fought, punched, clamored, and demanded. Mothers separated combatants. But the youngsters went away happy, each holding, in a moist hand, a mask.

It was a success. Wide childish eyes were enough proof.

After the tumult and the shouting died, a blue-eyed little boy registered a complaint to one of the clerks.

"I don't want a little pig, I want a wolf," he said.

He held out a pink bit of the Disney frivolity.

His mother explained. "He's really not at all ferocious, but he'd rather be a wolf than a pig. Can I make an exchange? His father's been parked outside for half an hour, waiting for us."

The exchange was made. The little boy smiled as he took the coveted mask, put it on, and roared vigorously.

Who will be afraid of that big bad wolf?

Washington Is Honored By Italian Law Institute

Rome (AP).—The tale of "Giorgio"—as he is called here—and the cherry tree has been forgotten in a government effort to reveal George Washington as a soldier and statesman to Italian students.

The Italian Institute of International Law has published a book called "George Washington in the Second Centenary of His Birth." It is a compilation of the work of nine biographers, most of them Italians.

The object is to "illuminate the admirable and complex personality" of the American hero.

Your mouth, a scar of sorrow, etched
With exquisite finality
Upon a mask of stone; your eyes—
Twin arrows of brutality—
Are not without reproach; your life
Has left, its mark; but I, untossed
By life that's uncompassionate,
Would give you back the peace you lost.

The Persians Played It

Miss Carr Gets Phoenix Cross In Refugee Aid

Relief Efforts in Balkans Bring Decoration Today to Health Expert.

Admiral Mark L. Bristol, formerly American High Commissioner in Constantinople, will preside at the ceremony this afternoon in the Red Cross Auditorium when Miss Alice G. Carr, health director of the Near East Foundation in the Balkans, will receive the Silver Cross of the Order of Phoenix from the Greek Minister, the Hon. Charalambos Simopoulos. Admiral Bristol will be assisted by Dr. Barclay Acheson, of New York, executive secretary of the Near East Foundation, who for many years was general director of overseas operations for Near East Relief.

To France in 1917.

The presentation of the medal is Greece's recognition of Miss Carr's 11 years' work in the control of tuberculosis in the Balkans. She served through the thick of one of the greatest emergency relief jobs known in history when Greece, in 1922-23, opened its doors to 1,500,000 poverty-stricken refugees fleeing from Asia Minor.

Miss Carr went to France in 1917 as a member of the first base unit of Johns Hopkins Hospital. After the war she was with the Red Cross in Austria, Poland and Czechoslovakia. She went to Greece in 1922 to work for the Near Eastern refugees.

Irish Sense of Humor Helps Miss Farnum in Trying Task

Many Amusing Incidents Recalled in Experience With Armies of Enumerators; Started Career as Writer, But Is Too Busy for That Now.

Government work! What magic and promise those two words hold for American women! From urbane New York and the smallest village—even from the United States' far-flung possessions—come eager-eyed girls and women to Washington to work for Uncle Sam.

Appointments for positions in the Nation's Capital are keenly sought. Glamour surrounds even the smallest job. Every typist, every clerk has high hopes of rising to an important executive place. Sometimes these hopes are realized. Many a woman who started at the bottom of her particular department or bureau has worked her way to the top—often to a position that has never before been held by a member of her sex.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

Miss Emily Ida Farnum, the first woman personnel officer of the Bureau of Census, gives devout thanks for an Irish grandfather. She said so when interviewed at her office in the Department of Commerce Building.

"From that ancestor I've inherited the ability to laugh at things that would drive most people to despair," declared Miss Farnum, who probably interviews more persons than any personnel director in the country.

Upon her shoulders falls the burden of recruiting within a few weeks the thousands of men and women who take the census of the United States. For the census of 1930 she had to select an army of 6,700 workers from the hordes that had passed the civil serviceexamination. She interviewed hundreds. Others were contacted by letter.

Miss Farnum needed no Irish grandfather to make her smile at some of the replies she received to the letters. A little country girl, who had never been more than a few miles from home, wrote that she would be pleased to accept a position with the Bureau of Census; told what time her train would arrive in Washington and asked that someone from the bureau be sent to meet her.

"I had to write her that the United States Government does not meet trains," said Miss Farnum, her eyes crinkled with laughter. "I advised her to go to the Y. W. C. A. as soon as she got here and then to come in and talk with me the next day."

Received Wrong Letter.

"Then there was the young man in Puerto Rico who, through a mistake in our office, received a letter asking him to report the next morning at the Commerce Building," continued Miss Farnum. "He had been sent the form letter that was intended for persons who live in the District. His letter should have asked him to report in a month. I guess he was pretty excited about the whole affair." She laughed heartily as she recalled the incident.

"Here, I'll let you read his reply," and Miss Farnum dived into some papers on her desk. With a triumphant gesture she spread out the Puerto Rican's letter. It said: "Referring to your mistaken letter, is impossible for me to call at Building D because my present residence is in Puerto Rico and that is to wander." He went on to say that he was available and willing to accept the position "for which he had suffered the examination."

No matter what difficulties attend the recruiting of the census army, it is even harder to disband it, according to Miss Farnum.

Stayed in Capital.

"The fact that some of the workers stayed on in Washington after the last census was completed created a serious unemployment problem here," she declared. "A great many of the workers were young people—boys and girls who had seized an opportunity to see the Nation's Capital and who hated to leave when their jobs with the Bureau of Census were over."

When it was at all possible, Miss Farnum found other positions for those young persons. She tried to persuade others to return to their homes.

In the years when no census is being taken the personnel officer has a permanent staff of 900 to look after. That number has been swelled within the last few months to 2,500 by CWA temporary workers. Miss Farnum assigns all of them to the different units and then manages to keep an eye on them so that she will know when they are ready for promotion.

Emily Ida Farnum came to Washington at the beginning of the century with the intention of doing newspaper work. For two years she had been selling articles to newspapers and magazines in her home city, New York. But after she had been in Washington for several weeks and had not found a place on a newspaper, she decided to go into other work and write in her spare time.

Start of Census Work.

She was fortunate in being selected personal secretary to the appointment clerk of the twelfth decennial census. At night she attended George Washington University where she studied literature, history and art. And she continued to sell articles to newspapers, including The Washington Post.

After serving as assistant to the appointment clerks of the thirteenth and fourteenth decennial censuses, Miss Farnum was made appointment clerk for the fifteenth census.

Several years ago she gave up her writing.

"I have so little spare time now," she said. "Looking after 900 persons is a job in itself. Then there is a lot of correspondence and some of it is very puzzling. This letter is a good example of that."

Irish Blood a Help.

She unfolded a sheet of thin white paper bearing the date line of a Western village. Scrawled upon it was this plea: "Dear Sir, will you please give me the proper way to receive the position of taking the census of my county."

Said Miss Farnum, "The writer of that letter was a long way off from receiving the position, if he had only known it. He hadn't even filled out an application or taken the Civil Service exam. I had to write and explain those little details to him. And I thanked Heaven again for my Irish grandfather."

Dr. Walter Reed Shrine Is Lure In Garden Fete

Surgeon's Birthplace in Gloucester County Open April 23-28.

Gloucester, Va., March 18 (Spl.). Belroi, Gloucester County, the birthplace of Dr. Walter Reed, will be open for visitors during Garden Week in Virginia, April 23-28, it has been announced by Mrs. Lewis G. Larus, State chairman for the week.

Belroi is a shrine of more than National interest. Here Walter Reed, leader in the discovery of the cause of yellow fever, was born in 1851 and lived until his family moved to Farmville, Prince Edward County, when he was 6 years of age.

This simple cottage of two rooms and a garret and a log cabin kitchen was restored by the Medical Society of Virginia in 1927. More than 3,000 persons were present when Belroi was opened to the public. Some came from far-off lands.

Almost every schoolboy knows the story of Walter Reed, his indomitable spirit and constant devotion to medical science and the cause of human welfare. To see this now sacred spot where the youngest son of a Methodist clergyman was born and lived during his early years is for most people a stirring experience.

Increasing numbers visit Belroi annually, pay respect to the spirit of one of America's and the world's benefactors, and note the simple environment in which this immortal leader of medical science lived as a child.

A trip to Belroi brings one close to many other points of interest, including quaint and historic Gloucester Courthouse. This section was one of the first to be settled by the English in the early Colonial days.

Don't Clutter Up Entrance Halls

Jo Ellen Maxson Gives Hint on Decoration of Small Space.

By Jo Ellen Maxson.

The entrance hall is the key-note to the personality of your house. It should reflect cheer and hospitality by means of well chosen combinations of carpeting, wall finishes and furniture with a definite color scheme in mind.

Some good general principles to follow when decorating your hall.

Decorate only the flat surfaces. That is, use furniture which adapts itself well to wall spaces such as narrow console tables, mirrors or straight-backed chairs. Furniture that projects too far out into the room gives a cluttered effect in so small a space.

Second, use only the necessary pieces of furniture. An entrance hall is designed primarily for use, and unrelated pieces have no purpose there. There should be a table to hold letters, a card tray, etc., a chair or two, and a mirror for that last minute glance before going out.

It is important to keep the color scheme of the adjoining room in mind when decorating the entrance hall in order to keep a unified effect throughout.

One very small hall carries out this idea. It opens off of a living room which is carried out in yellows, greens and beige.

The walls of the hall are painted flat yellow to bring light into an otherwise drab little room. Eggplant carpeting is used on the floor and on the steps leading to the second floor. There is a small conventional pattern in green and beige in the carpeting to keep foot-prints from being too noticeable.

A semicircular walnut console table is flanked on either side by two walnut ladder back chairs. The chair seats are upholstered in antique yellow moire. Over the console is a mirror in a walnut frame. The card tray and smoking accessories are in brass.

Miss Maxson will be glad to give individual help in home decorating problems. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

Denmark Next In Post Travel Lecture Topics

Films to Picture Europe's Oldest Kingdom for Audience Tomorrow.

With only three lectures remaining on the schedule of 20 illustrated travel talks sponsored by The Washington Post, Helge Peterson, well-known authority on Denmark at 8:15 tomorrow night at the Masonic Auditorium, New York avenue at Thirteenth street. Motion pictures and stereopticon views in full color will supplement the travelogue.

Although Denmark occupies the peninsula of Jutland, on the main land, the kingdom includes 500 additional inslands, including Sjaelland, upon which is situated the Danish capital, Copenhagen. This beautiful city is called "the Paris of the North" and is also designated "The City of Beautiful Towers." The history of the city is closely related to that of the nation, which is the oldest kingdom in Europe, and some of its fascinating past will be disclosed by Mr. Peterson in addition to an analysis of its present importance and interesting views of modern life and activities.

Another of Denmark's islands is Funen, between Sjaelland and Rutland, whose chief city, Odense, was the birthplace of Hans Christian Anderson, creator of the immortal fairy tales.

Denmark does not share the midnight sun, common to Norway and Sweden, but it is so far north that from early May to August the sun sinks below the horizon for only a few hours each evening. Nights are then but a glamorous twilight. On the other hand, the influence of marine currents and the prevailing low terrain give Denmark a climate that is considerably milder than that of other countries in the same latitude.

Through his talk and pictures, Mr. Petersen will try to give his audience a clear and comprehensive impression of a most interesting country, which could only be excelled by an actual visit to its quaint villages, busy cities, fertile farm lands and seaports.

Tickets for the lecture will be available at the Masonic Auditorium box office, beginning at 7 p. m. tomorrow at the cost of 25 cents.

Parley Called Today In N. Y. Taxicab Strike

New York, March 18 (AP).—Officers of the striking taxicab drivers' unions and heads of the operating companies were asked today to confer Monday afternoon with Mrs. Elinore Herrick, acting director of the regional labor board, in an effort to end the drivers' walkout.

Samuel Orner, president of the Manhattan branch of the Taxicab Drivers Union of Greater New York, declared the strike had "practically tied up the taxicab industry in the city."

Germans Have No Jobs; HateWork, Go 'on Strike'

Hamburg, Germany, March 18 (AP). Fifty unemployed persons went "on strike" today while being transported to a Nazi labor camp for work.

They marched back to their home town of Henelingen when a truck broke down. The North German News Agency said the workers had made scornful remarks about "hard work and small pay," and that three of their ringleaders had been arrested.

Davison Plans Airplane Hunt For Dinosaurs

Dr. Barnum Brown Heads Museum Expedition to Run Down Fossils.

New York, March 18 (AP).—An aerial hunt for dinosaurs that roamed the Big Horn badlands of Montana, Wyoming and South Dakota 12,000,000 years ago will be undertaken this summer by the American Museum of Natural History.

F. Trubee Davison, president of the museum, announced tonight that the expedition, financed by Harry Sinclair, oil operator, will take the field in June, under the leadership of Dr. Barnum Brown.

In addition to making an aerial survey of fossil regions, the expedition will excavate two skeletons of prehistoric giants, which were found in 1932.

Dr. Brown said the monsters were of a new species which probably belonged to the group of dinosaurs of which the huge brontosaur is a representative. He estimated their length, from head to tail, at 50 feet and expressed the belief that they lived 120,000,000 years ago.

Headquarters for the expedition will be established at Cloverly, 25 miles northeast of Graybull, Wyo.

"I know it seems preposterous when I say that dinosaurs can be traced from the air," said Dr. Brown, "but the fact of the matter is that the peculiar geological formations in which fossils are found, can be seen from aloft with greater clarity in many instances than it is possible to locate them from the ground."

Zita Follows Coffin Of Brother to Tomb

Paris, March 18 (AP).—The body of Prince Sixte de Bourbon-Parme, explorer and peace negotiator during the World War, who died here Wednesday, was taken to Souvigne today to be placed in the family vault.

Prison Reform Wave Spreads Over Country

Dillinger Break Is Climax of Long Series of Felon Exposes.

Chicago, March 18 (AP).—A wave of prison scandals, with John Dillinger's comic opera break riding the crest, has resulted in inauguration of a National movement looking to penal reform.

A grand jury and a half-dozen State officials are engaged in determining if collusion existed in the Dillinger escape and two guards have been charged with aiding America's No. 1 public enemy.

In Ohio Warden Preston E. Thomas asserted an American Scotland Yard and the placing of all police officers under civil service, with a State central control, would do much to improve conditions.

Welfare Isle Bad Spot.

In New York, the new correction commissioner, Austin H. MacCormick, who started his regime by a raid on the Welfare Island Penitentiary, said he found prisoners virtually in control of the institution.

Wisconsin has similar investigations. Testimony concerning conditions in the Milwaukee House of Correction said inmates indulged in riotous parties enlivened with liquor. An investigation of the Oshkosh Hospital for the Insane brought dismissal of 17 attendants and resignation of the superintendent.

Reports of the State auditor to Gov. Henry Horner of Illinois said large supplies of narcotics at Joliet Prison were unaccounted for; that accounts were kept largely by inmates, and that they were in bad shape. The Governor ordered a thorough inquiry.

Asylums Crowded.

There is legislation brewing in Kansas to examine applicants for prison guards more stringently and to discipline inmates more rigidly.

South Carolina is planning to place convicts from their crowded cells on farms to raise more of the food they eat.

The report of a legislative committee on the Sedro-Woolley Hospital for Washington's insane has not been made public by the Governor. Two inmates committed suicide while the lawmakers were there.

California is considering a third State penitentiary because of overcrowded conditions at San Quentin and Folsom.

Borglum to Address Capital Poets Group

The poets' council, of the National Woman's Party, will hear an address by Gutzon Borglum, sculptor, on "The Allied Arts and Giving Beauty Back to the American People," at the Alva Belmont House tomorrow at 8:30 p. m.

Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, president of the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs, will speak, A. Nimmerrichter, violinist, will give selections; Mrs. Eugene Hurdle will read poems, and Miss Myrtle R. Patterson, chairman, will preside. On the reception committee are Mrs. Howard J. Klossner, Mrs. Stearns Gray, Miss Katherina Kennedy and Miss Gladys Rowe.

Trade Board Backs Capper Budget Split

Senate Committee Will Study Separation at Next Meeting.

Support of the proposal of Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas, for removal of the District budget from the jurisdiction of the Federal Budget Bureau was pledged by officials of the Washington Board of Trade and Federation of Citizens Associations yesterday.

One dissenting voice was raised, William C. Miller, president of the Washington Chamber of Commerce, declaring that he believes the present system is satisfactory. Directors of the chamber, however, have gone on record as favoring public hearings when department heads send their budgets to the Commissioners before estimates reach the Budget Bureau.

Edward F. Colladay, chairman of the finance committee of the Washington Board of Trade, said that the Capper proposal will be given the attention of his committee at its next meeting. The committee recently has been organized to include representatives of all businesses and professions in the District.

Other Cities "Free."

"I believe that a District director should control local budgets," Colladay said. "In many cities budgets are not under jurisdiction of State officials but are under a municipal director.

"The function of the Bureau of the Budget," Colladay continued, "is to keep the expenditures of the District within the income or means to pay. When you confuse the means of the Federal Government and the District you get undesirable results. Ability of the District to pay should be predicated on District revenue, plus a fair contribution from the Government."

Colladay welcomed the announcement of Senator Elmer Thomas, of Oklahoma, chairman of the Senate District Appropriations sub-committee, that he will have the question of divorce of the District budget from the Budget Bureau considered when the appropriation bill comes before his group. Data gathered by the trade board finance committee in regard to local financial affairs will be offered the committee, Colladay said.

Yaden for Divorce.

James G. Yaden, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, declared the federation is overwhelmingly in favor of an independent District budget.

"At least 90 per cent of our members are behind the proposal," he said.

Taking an opposite view, Miller said:

"The present system of having our appropriations checked by the Bureau of the Budget seems to me to be satisfactory and I have no quarrel with it. As for the suggestion of an independent director in the District, we have one now in Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor."

Commenting on Senator Capper's criticism of the local school system, Miller expressed the view that "this country has a tendency to go too far when it comes to spending the taxpayers' money on education."

"Public hearings don't amount to much," he said. "An interested group will turn out to agitate its desires, but it is not a true barometer of public opinion. Many persons who have opposite views never appear at such hearings."

Fruit Man Dies BattlingFlames At Road Stand

Stricken by Heart Attack; Two Counties Dotted by Brush Fires.

One man lost his life and the fire departments of Washington and Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties were kept on the run most of Sunday as the result of more than half a hundred brush and grass fires in the Capital and is environs.

While property damage was slight, many homes were threatened as rapidly drying grass and brush accumulated during the winter became ignited and flames were spread by strong gusts of wind that prevailed much of the day.

William W. Grant, 59, proprietor of the Hollywood Orchards on the Seventh Street pike in Montgomery County, died while fighting a fire in his orchard about 2 p. m. With members of the Silver Spring Volunteer Fire Department, he was attempting to beat out flames that were menacing his rather elaborate roadside stand on the pike. He was missed by firemen, who started a search for him. He was found a few minutes later, apparently a victim of a heart attack due to excitement.

Fire Capt. Walter Brandt took him to Garfield Hospital, the firemen's inhalator being used throughout the trip, but he was pronounced dead on arrival.

Mr. Grant is survived by his wife, Mrs. Anna Kahlert Grant, who was under the care of a physician last night, suffering from shock, and a brother, Charles F. Grant, of Baltimore.

The body was taken to the Colonial home in Rockville, Md., but arrangements had not been completed last night.

Washington firemen were called out by 42 alarms between midnight Sunday and dusk last evening, but practically no damage was done.

As the engines screeched through the streets many persons called newspaper offices to ask where "the big fire" was.

Prince Georges County firemen, likewise, put in a busy day. Four alarms were due to woods fires along the River road, apparently started by sparks from locomotives. An equal number of alarms from other parts of the county called out various suburban departments.

Symphony to Play Patrons' Favorites

Program Built on 2,000 Votes Cast for Concert.

More than 2,000 patrons of the National Symphony Orchestra have voted for compositions which they wish to hear at the "request" concert of the orchestra next Sunday afternoon in Constitution Hall. The balloting has resulted in the following program:

Overture to
"Iphigenie en Aulide".....Gluck
"Scheherazade" Suite,
Rimski-Korsakov
Excerpts from
"Nutcracker" Suite, Tschaikowsky
"Bolero" .....Ravel

Rimski-Korsakov's symphonic suite received 490 votes, the highest number cast for any single composition. Ravel's "Bolero" came second, with 430, and the Tschaikowsky suite, third with 340. Weber's "Euryanthe" overture was a close second to the Gluck work.

$3,500,000 to Be Spent Replacing Steam Locomotion.

19 Union StationTracks, Yards, Engine Houses to Be Changed.

An army of 1,200 furloughed railway men will swing into action here this week, when the Pennsylvania Railroad actually begins work on the electrification of its freight and passenger tracks through Washington. The project calls for the expenditure of $3,500,000.

The construction program will mean the electrification of 19 tracks in the Union Station, several engine terminals, the Virginia avenue tunnel, part of the First avenue tunnel, portions of the huge Potomac freight yard near Alexandria and the construction of several substations.

When the workmen have finished their job here, they will have completed the last leg of electrified tracks operated by the railroad between here and New York. More than 80 miles of right-of-way in the District is involved. The project is financed partly through a loan from the PWA.

All Electric by January.

By next January all passenger trains between Washington and New York will be operated under electric power, with giant trolleys high above the rails driving the locomotives.

Under the new power the carriers will, at first, observe the same schedules they have in the past, maintaining an average speed of between 60 and 70 miles an hour. It is possible, however, railroad officials point out, to obtain a speed of 90 miles an hour with electricity.

First steps in the project will come when workmen begin digging foundations for the overhead poles to support the electric feed wires on the passenger trackage leading to the Union Station from the north. Shortly thereafter, excavations for foundations will be started on the Anacostia branch, the connecting freight line which leaves the main tracks just south of Landover, Md., and runs through Washington and over the river to the Potomac yards.

The Pennsylvania's two main tracks entering Washington from the north will be electrified as far as New York avenue. From there six tracks will be electrified to the "K" tower, just outside the Union Station.

Terminal Interior Included.

Within the terminal itself, tracks Nos. 12 to 20 inclusive, on the upper level, and Nos. 20 to 29 inclusive, on the lower level will be prepared for operation by electricity.

On the lower level the tracks will be electrified 500 feet to the First avenue tunnel. This, officials explain, will provide convenient arrangements for switching and cutting off electric locomotives from passenger trains arriving at the terminal.

Portions of the Eckington passenger car and engine yard and the Ivy City terminal, where Pennsylvania locomotives and cars are maintained for trains serving the Union Station, also will be electrified.

Approximately 39 miles of track will be changed from steam to electric operation on the railroad's main passenger line, and 40 miles of track on the Anacostia freight line.

Signal and communication systems will be completely rearranged along the electrified right-of-way. These include telephone, telegraph and signal lines.

Wife Injured In Fall, Police Hunt Husband

Mrs. Louise Lucas Given "Even Chance" to Live Following Plunge.

Mysterious calls for police, a young wife's two-story plunge from a rooming house window and the subsequent disappearance of her husband combined last night to puzzle police as they sought to learn the story behind a family quarrel.

Mrs. Louise Lucas, 27, was reported near death in Emergency Hospital. She fell 15 feet early yesterday from the second-floor window of her boarding house in the 1100 block of Massachusetts avenue northwest. Police, responding to a third call at the Massachusetts avenue house, found Mrs. Lucas unconscious in a rear areaway.

Shortly before 4 a. m., police said, they were twice called to the rooming house to quell a reported disturbance. On the second visit Mrs. Lucas and her husband were ordered to stop loud talking and arguing. Neighbors, police declared, complained they were unable to sleep.

Less than 10 minutes after police left the second time, a third call was received. It was then Mrs. Lucas was found in the areaway. Her husband had disappeared. A lookout was posted, but late last night he had not been located.

Mrs. Lucas, with broken bones and severe lacerations, was given an "even chance" to live. After regaining consciousness she told police she could not remember what happened.

Miss Agnes Hill, of the 2400 block Sixteenth street northwest, told police yesterday her evening bag, containing jewelry valued at $225, was stolen Saturday night while she was visiting a downtown night club.

She said her loss included a platinum wrist watch set with 22 diamonds and a jeweled compact.

Union Backs D. C. School Janitor Fight

Charges Present System Is Dangerous; Hits Red Tape.

The recent attack on the custodian and janitor system in local schools by L. C. Wormington, engineer in charge of the District Repair Shop, was supported yesterday by Local Union, No. 102, of the International Union of Operating Engineers.

The union, composed of licensed engineers employed in the white public schools, sent a letter to Mr. Wormington, thanking him for his "fearless and truthful criticism."

Mr. Wormington, a week ago, in criticizing the heating system at the Force School, blamed the janitor in charge, and declared that all school janitors who fire furnaces should be replaced by licensed engineers. His opinions appeared in an exclusive story in The Post.

Urge Separate Bureau.

At this time, Jere J. Crane, assistant superintendent of schools in charge of business affairs, replied that the District Repair Shop had failed to make necessary repairs on the furnace and for this reason it was not furnishing the proper heat. Sufficient heat was circulated at the school last week, and Mr. Wormington said this was because the janitor had been coached by men from his department.

The operating engineers union recommends that all employes engaged in operation and maintenance of schools buildings and equipment be incorporated in a separate department, under the management of "a qulified official," the entire department to be independent of the Board of Education.

"The engineers employed in local public schools are at the bid and call of principals to perform all manner of duties," W. I. Green, president of the union, declared. "These duties range from caring for walks and shrubbery to seeing that the buildings are kept clean.

Plea to School Board.

"Engineers are ordered from their posts in the boiler and engine rooms at the whim of principals, custodians and oftimes teachers. Often they are called away for an hour and in this time the boiler could explode."

The union also criticized the red-tape involved in obtaining supplies and replacements and repairs for schools. Recommendation is made that the engineer-custodian be permitted to contact the officer who is responsible rather than go through the roundabout channels of communication.

The union has submitted a brief to the Board of Education, asking that these and other reforms be put into effect.

Services for Railroad Traffic Manager Set Tomorrow.

Roanoke, Va., March 18 (AP).—B. W. Herrman, vice president of the Norfolk and Western Railway Co., in charge of traffic, died at his home here today. He had been ill for some time. Funeral services will be held at the First Baptist Church at 2:30 p. m., Tuesday.

On July 1, 1891, he became traveling freight agent for the Norfolk and Western. He held that position until June 3, 1893, when he was appointed freight agent here for the road. In 1894, he was made freight agent at Columbus for the Cleveland, Akron & Columbus Railway, now a part of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Seventeen years later he was transferred to Cincinnati as General agent. From that time his rise was rapid.

December 1, 1912, he was promoted to assistant general freight agent at Columbus, and to general freight agent in July, 1917. He came to Roanoke in 1918 and was made assistant freight traffic manager.

May 1, 1914, he was appointed vice president in charge of traffic.

On March 4, 1933, Mr. Herrman was presented a diamond insignia of the Norfolk & Western Veterans Association for having completed 50 years of service. Presentation was made by A. C. Needles, president of the Norfolk & Western.

Mr. Herrman was actively identified with the civic, fraternal and religious life of Roanoke for many years. He was a member of the First Baptist Church and was a member of the church's finance committee and associate secretary of the Sunday School.

A Kiwanian and former president of the Roanoke Kiwanis Club, he was associated, too, with numerous social and fraternal organizations, including the Shenandoah Club and the Roanoke Country Club. He was a Mason.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Leah J. Herrman, and the following children: B. W. Herrman, jr., of Chicago; D. T. Herrman, of Hamilton, Ohio; W. E. Herrman, of Roanoke; Mrs. I. D. Kurbatov, and Henry Herrman, of Chicago.

Montgomery Official to Speak.

Dr. V. L. Ellicott, Montgomery County health officer, will be the speaker at a meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association of the East Silver Spring School tonight. A short musical program will also be given.

Winter's Final Visit Marked By 40-Mile Wind in Capital

Another Day of Gusty Weather Is Predicted With Mercury Drop.

As Washington's citizens clutched at their hats yesterday as gusts of wind reached a maximum velocity of 40 miles, small craft were warned by the Weather Bureau of storms sweeping the coast from Delaware Breakwaters to Boston.

Caught up by a puff, a plane was tiptilted and cracked a wing in attempting to land at the Queen's Chapel Flying Field near Hyattsville, Md. William Henderson, who owns the plane, a student pilot, and George Tinko, a passenger living at Brentwood, Md., escaped without injury.

Winter's farewell call before the approach of spring, which by calendar reckoning will be ushered in Wednesday, is expected to be represented again today by the cloudy and windy weather of yesterday. The Weather Bureau predicts that the temperature today may be a few degrees lower than that of last pected dto touch the freezing point. pecte dto touch the freezing point.

Storm signals flashed by the Weather Buerau yesterday spoke of a disturbance over Maine, moving rapidly east northeastward that would cause strong southwest winds, later shifting to strong northeast that might reach gale intensity.

Proposed Rum Store Opposed In Clarendon

"It Wouldn't Increase Our Trade," Says Business Men's Leader.

BUREAU OF THE POST.

Huge Kitchen Ready to Feed 6,500 Pupils

Central School Cooking Plant Starts Work Tomorrow.

Mrs. Katharine Ansley in Charge of Preparing Hot Lunches.

The central public school kitchen, established to provide daily meals for more than 6,500 children, will begin functioning tomorrow under the direction of Mrs. Katharine McK. Ansley, in the old Wisconsin Manual Training School in Georgetown.

Workmen have been equipping the building the last two months. During this time the preparing of the school meals has been in charge of Earl E. Harrington, local restaurateur.

The central kitchen is provided with the newest cooking equipment. There are 14 stoves and gigantic saucepans. Several hundred shiny 5-gallon and 3-gallon aluminum containers flank the walls of the kitchen. They will be used to transport the lunches to the various schools. Trucks, operated by CWA employes, will travel ten separate routes daily to deliver the food.

Six thousand sandwiches will be prepared before 9:30 o'clock tomorrow and every morning thereafter. Twenty sandwich workers will perform this work. They also will sort and distribute the thousands of oranges that will make up the part of the menu for each child.

Among the wonders of the central kitchen are the huge ice boxes. Towering to the ceiling, they are capable of holding thousands of pounds of meat. Other features are an electrical meat and vegetable chopper and an electrical dish sterilizer.

Forty workers, including 12 cooks, will be employed at the kitchen. They will wear special uniforms made by CWA workers. They will work 24 hours a week.

The job of purchasing supplies is in charge of Harry M. Gardner. Much of the food will come from surplus Federal supplies.

Mrs. Ansley will be assisted in operating the kitchen by Miss Sue Frick, and Miss Ethel Nugent.

Dize's Death Laid To Heart Disease

Coroner's Jury Finds No Signof Foul Play.

Crisfield, Md., March 18 (Spl.).—A coroner's jury investigating the death of W. Sherman Dize, today found Dize died from a heart attack.

Mr. Dize had not been seen since Wednesday. Several friends instituted a search for him and his body was found in a small room of a blacksmith shop on lower Main street by Carl Sterling and Chief of Police Willard Laird, about noon today. It was at first thought he had been murdered, but coroners's physician, Dr. William H. Coulbourn found no signs of foul play.

Magistrate Fred N. Holland empaneled a jury immediately. Mr. Dize was well known on the Eastern Shore of Marland, having owned a large fleet of trucks. He is survived by nine children and was about 45 years of age.

Nats' Bosses Fear Only Yankees and Red Sox in Drive for Pennant

Other Clubs' Bolstering No Worry

Boston's Slab Strength Alarms; Yawkey May Buy More Men.

By Shirley L. Povich
(Sports Editor, The Post).

BILOXI, Miss., March 18 (Spl.).—Burrowing beneath the thick layer of hokum about a well-balanced league and the season's annual crop of statements to the effect that every club in the circuit is strengthened, &c., &c., ad nauseam, the unvarnished truth is that the bigwigs of the Washington Ball Club fear only two of their seven rivals—New York and Boston. Owner Clark Griffith and Manager Joe Cronin will prattle along about Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, the Athletics and Tigers, pointing out the improvement here and the added strength there, the while shaking their heads in misgivings anent the task that confronts the Nats, but its the bunk, or buncombe, as the case may be.

The two clubs which are really causing the Nats' bosses any anxiety are the Yankees and the Red Sox: the one their most consistent and persistent challenger of 1933 and the the other universally conceded to be the only team in the league which has been bolstered to the extent that it commands the deepest respect from the entire circuit.

May Round Out Club.

Cronin and Griffith are keenly alive to the possibility that the Yankees may develop a pair of rookie infielders to round out a club that for sheer power is already the class of the league, what with such solid sockers as Ruth, Gehrig, Dickey, Lazzeri, Chapman and Combs hanging around the premises.

And the Yankees' pitching is of a sort to merit consideration when the subject of pitching generally is injected into the discussion. Bulking large in the Yankees' prospects of 1934 is the figure of young Johnny Allen, the freshman star of '32 who was lost to the club for three months at the start of last season due to a sore arm.

Gomez, Allen, Ruffing and Van Atta represent a first-four pitching staff that gives the Yankees ample protection on the mound, with Van Atta last year having displayed a particular aptitude for beating Washington. Aside from the loss of Allen's services last season, Lefty Gomez was pitching under par and improvement is looked for in that quarter.

Dixie Walker Feared.

Even the possibility of Ruth playing only half the Yankees' games in 1934 is of little consolation to the Nats, who have seen enough of Dixie Walker to note that the club will be far better off defensively with Ruth out of the line-up, with the added argument that Walker, himself, is no mean man with the bat.

And with Bill Dickey, conceded to be the best catcher in the league, the Yankees are exceedingly well fortified on the pivotal point of pitching and catching.

Danger to every club in the league is lurking up Boston way, or Griffith and Cronin are missing their guess. The revivified Red Sox may have their weak points, but overlooking their pitching staff is as easy as overlooking Kate Smith.

The Red Sox were tough enough for the Nats last year, despite the fact that Washington won 17 of the 22 games with Boston during the season. Several of these victories were achieved by the finicky margin of one run and thus Washington has ample cause to regard the remade Boston Club and its glittering pitching staff with more than a modicum of respect.

Pitching Strength.

Owner Tom Yawkey, in taking the rubber off his prodigious bankroll—and flourishing his fat checkbook in last winter's player market, has provided the Boston Club with a pitching staff that figures to have a powerful voice in the distribution of pennant honors.

Add Lefty Grove and Rube Walberg to such native talent as Lefty Bob Weiland, Gordon Rhodes and George Pipgras, and what do you have? Enough to put the fear of Hades in every manager in the league, and none realizes it more keenly than Cronin and Griffith.

And if Rick Ferrell is not the second best catcher in the league, then I just saw a bevy of white blackbirds flit across the Mississippi sound.

May Buy More Men.

The Boston infield, though bolstered by Max Bishop, may be shot full of holes and the outfield of Johnson, Cook and Reynolds is something less than airtight, but here again Owner Yawkey's bankroll may curve all ills if his defense proves to be a burden on his pitching. The entire league confidently expects Yawkey to go into the market again at the first sign of a slump by the Sox.

And another thing. The Nats will meet this Boston Club in five games before they start their first Western tour, which may be significant in view of the Boston team's powerful pitching, particularly in the spring of the year when the pitchers are ahead of the hitters.

It would be no surprise to Griffith if the Red Sox led the league for the first two months, he said today.

"Davis Cup Net Berth or Bust," New Indoor Champ Declares.

Plans Campaign So as to Be at Best for Team Try-Outs.

NEW YORK, March 18 (AP).—It's "Make the Davis Cup team or bust" with Lester R. Stoefen, and the lanky California giant is not going to let staleness come between him and the team trials in the middle of spring.

Refreshed by a good night's rest after a busy and profitable afternoon in the Seventh Regiment Armory yesterday, when he annexed both the National indoor singles and doubles championships, the blond Titan announced today plans for an immediate outdoor campaign which will carry him into the South and Southwest, and, he hopes, recognition on the international team.

To Play Against French.

The newly crowned indoor king will help carry the Star and Stripes against France in three of the five international team matches to be played Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings in the armory against a foreign force headed by Jean Borotra, and then with his doubles partner, George M. Lott, jr., Chicago, will leave immediately for Atlanta, Ga., where he will compete in the Southern Invitation beginning March 26.

"I may only play in the doubles with George in Atlanta," Stoefen said. "I felt pretty tired last night. Mangin had me running all over the court and my legs were quite weak after the doubles match."

Stoefen defeated Gregory S. Mangin, the playing-through champion, 6—1, 8—6, 6—4, and with Lott won from Berkeley Bell and Frank Bowden, 4—6, 6—3, 6—4, 6—4, all in the space of little more than three hours.

Enters Houston Tourney.

From Atlanta, Stoefen will travel westward to Houston, Tex., where he will play both singles and doubles in an invitation tournament starting April 2. He played in the 1933 Houston invitation and was eliminated in the semifinals. His next appearance will be in Pinehurst, N. C., commencing April 10, and from there he will go to White Sulphur for a week's play.

After that tour, he will return to New York and await the action of the Davis Cup team's selection committee headed by Holcombe Ward and R. Norris Williams, captain.

"It is true that indoor tennis," Stoefen said, "is something different from the game played on turf and that the Davis Cup players will be picked for their showing and merit outdoors. But the results of my first major indoor tournament have so encouraged me that I am confident I can carry on at the same pace and with similar results outdoors.

"At any rate, you can say for me it's make the Davis Cup team or bust. Tell the folks back home in Los Angeles that I'll be seeing them probably in September."

Golfwomen Open North-South Play

Miss Orcutt Defends Title Starting Today.

Pinehurst, N. C., March 18 (AP).—Play for the women's North and South golf championship will begin here tomorrow, with Miss Maureen Orcutt, of Englewood, N. J., defending the title she has won for the last three years.

The tourney will comprise 18 holes of qualifying play to be followed by matches of the same length.

Among those who have been here for the past week adjusting their games to Pinehurst's famous sand greens are Miss Charlotte Glutting, New Jersey star who was a semi-finalist in the Nationals last year, and Miss Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., who defeated Miss Helen Hicks, of New York, this winter in Florida.

In addition, a number of younger stars will compete, including Miss Deborah Verry, of Worcester, Mass.; Miss Betty Abernathy, of Pittsburgh; Miss Helen Waring, of Pinehurst, and Miss Edith Quier, of Reading, Pa.

Bourbon Prince Wins Feature at New Orleans

New Orleans, March 18 (AP).—Bourbon Prince, racing in the colors of Mrs. F. P. Letellier, of New Orleans, today won the featured fifth race of an all-claiming card which marked the final day of the Fair Grounds winter meeting.

The winner was easily the best of the band which ran a mile and one-sixteenth over a track made sloppy by heavy rain. He finished with five lengths to spare over Bob Weidel who came in second, just four lengths ahead of Thistle Fyrn.

Bourbon Prince paid $9.20 to win in the $2 mutuels, $4.20 to place and $3.40 to show. Bob Weidel paid $5 and $3.80 and Thistle Fyrn rewarded his backers in third place $7.20 to show.

Mitchell's Wins From German Booters

1-0 Victory Nets Place in Southeastern Finals for The Post Cup.

MITCHELL'S STORE defeated German-Americans yesterday by the close margin of 1-0, thereby gaining the right to take part in the final round of the Southeastern Association Cup competition for The Post trophy. The result can be classed as a lucky one, as a wind-controlled ball eluded Mayer and Bailey touched the sphere into the net with but ten minutes to play.

The game was robbed of much of its interest by the high wind that prevailed and behind which Mitchell's Store elected to play in the opening half. Rather surprisingly, the German team showed better command of the ball and got greater length kicking against the wind than did its opponents, and as a result threatened Ordey several times.

Mayer Bombarded.

Mitchell's gradually took the upper hand and bombarded Mayer strenuously for most of the period, losing many chances because of inability to gauge the gale, which made the ball play many strange antics. Horning was impassable, and the story of the first half may be summed up in the foregoing, with neither team scoring.

Starting the second half, the Germans were picked to win because of the elements being in their favor, but for 15 minutes Mitchell's hung around Mayer and gave him plenty to worry about without actually scoring.

Then the German forwards got into their stride and kept the ball in opposition territory for most of the time, but like the Mitchell front line, failed to allow for the wind, many shots going harmlessly past.

Bailey Finally Scores.

Japanese May Quit Far-East Olympics

Manila, P. I., March 18 (AP).—A hint that Japan may quit the Far-Eastern Olympic games after the tenth game to be held at Manila May 12 to 19 unless Manchukuo is permitted to participate was voiced today by Dr. Tadaoki Tamomoto, representative of the Japan Athletic Association. He arrived to confer with Philippine officials.

China opposed admission of Manchukuo, holding this was tantamount to recognition. The constitution provides that admission of another country requires the unanimous consent of Japan, China and Philippines. The Dutch East Indies and French Indo-China have been admitted to participation in the forthcoming event, for which a plant costing $250,000 is being completed. Tamomoto will confer tomorrow with officials, who have pointed out that the decision rests entirely with China because of the unanimous consent clause.

Quarles Foe Of Goldstein Tonight

Rules Slight Favorite, Each Battler Sees K. O. for Self.

RICHMOND, VA., March 18 (Spl.).—The long-awaited return bout between Bobby Goldstein, former Virginia and Southern Conference champion, and Norment Quarles, his only conqueror in collegiate competition, will actually materialize here tomorrow night in the City auditorium. The encounter will be a three-round affair held under A. A. U. sanction and promoted by Walter Heenan.

Goldstein dropped a rather close decision to Quarles in a dual meet between Virginia and North Carolina held on the latter's home grounds at Chapel Hill last year. An attack of influenza was cited as the reason for Goldstein's defeat, but many close followers of affairs fistic are of the opinion that influenza or no influenza, the Tarheel Tartar would have been his superior that night.

Is Studying Here.

Goldstein has since completed his studies at the University of Virginia and is now taking law at George Washington University in Washington. Quarles continued his collegiate clouting career virtually without competition, taking the Southern Conference lightweight championship with little or no difficulty this year.

Opinion regarding the outcome of tomorrow's battle is fairly evenly divided, with a slight—very slight—edge in the betting, if any, in favor of the North Catrolina noggin-knocker, because of his superior punching powers. Observers of Goldstein's workouts in Washington declare the erstwhile Virginia champion is punching with much greater power than in the past, however, and are incined to the belief that he will right-hand the opposition into submission, perhaps via the knockout route.

Both Predict K. O.

Quarles is already in Richmond and Goldstein is expected to arrive early tomorrow. Neither contestant has hesitated to predict a knockout for himself, and both have tossed verbal brickbats in what may be an honest expression of mutual dislike—or very good ballyhoo.

Quarles, who will weigh in at about 135 pounds, is expected to have quite a weight pull on Goldstein, who tipped the beam at exactly 130 in Washington, today.

Sarazen-Kirkwood Score at Miami, 1 Up

Former's 8-Foot Putt Wins Exhibition Golf.

Miami, Fla., March 18 (AP).—In their last match before launching a world golfing tour, Gene Sarazen and Joe Kirkwood today defeated Mike Brady and Denny Shute in an exhibition game here as Sarazen sank an 8-foot putt on the eighteenth green to win 1 up.

Brady missed an 8-foot putt on the home green which would have forced the match to an extra hole.

Sarazen, the P. G. A. campion, and Kirkwood, the Australian trick shot artist, had a best ball of 68, three under par, while Shute, British Open titleholder, and Brady, former metropolitan champion, had a 69.

Leaving here Tuesday morning by commercial air liner, Sarazen and Kirkwood will embark on a 120,000-mile barnstorming tour that will take them to the West Indies, South America, Canada, Europe, the Far East and the Antipodes during the next ten months.

Gehringer Seeking An Extra $10,000

Gets It If He Teaches Parker, Rookie, How to Hit.

Lakeland, Fla., March 17 (AP).—Charley Gehringer, Detroit's second baseman and one of the best hitters in the American League, was wondering today what he could do with $10,000 extra added to his contract salary.

Gehringer hasn't earned the $10,000 yet, but all he has to do is to make a hitter out of Salty Parker, the flashy shortstop who made the grade with Detroit by his sensational field work in the past two weeks of training.

Watching Parker field fast grounders back of second and over at third, and make precision throws for putouts, Frank J. Navin, president of the Tigers, told Gehringer.

"If you can teach that fellow to hit as well as yourself, I'll give you $10,000."

"Well, I think I can find a place for it," replied Gehringer with nonchalance. So the $10,000 assignment is his.

Coast Soccer Booms.

Increasing popularity of soccer football has brought the scheduling of games between several of the larger schools of the Coast this winter, including several members of the Pacific Coast Conference.

Dundee Fights Al McCoy on Thursday

Rosenbloom Faces Brown Same Night; Godwin, Risko Foe Tonight.

NEW YORK, March 18 (AP).—By way of picking up any loose change that may be around, that busy pair of champions, Vince Dundee and Maxie Rosenbloom, get into action again this week to top the National boxing program.

Dundee, the middleweight title holder, takes on Al McCoy, of Waterville, Me., in a ten-rounder at Mechanics Hall, Boston, Thursday night. The same evening Rosenbloom encounters Leroy Brown, the Charleston Marine, at Charleston, S. C. Neither is risking his title in the encounters and there seems little likelihood that there is much risk of any kind.

Monday—At Daytona Beach, Fla., Bob Godwin, Adel, Ga., vs. Johnny Risko, Cleveland, heavyweights; Russ Rowsey, Alexandria, Va., vs. Norman Conrad, New Hampshire, light-heavyweights, and Lope Tenorio, Philippines, vs. Ray Kiser, Oklahoma City, welterweights, each 10; at Miami, Fla., Johnny Farr, Cleveland, vs. Eddie Shea, Chicago, featherweights, 10; at Albany, N. Y., Willie Dorenzo, Albany, vs. Benny Erlich, Albany, welterweights, 8; at Pittsburgh, Freddie Miller, Cincinnati, vs. Moze Butch, Pittsburgh, featherweights, 10 (nontitle).

Cunningham a Bit Put Out; Wanted to Run Mile in 4:06

NEW YORK, March 18 (AP).—Just being able to run the fastest mile indoors in track and field history would satisfy almost any athlete, except Glenn Cunningham, the human "jack rabbit" from the plains of Kansas.

Glenn did that when he stepped the distance in 4:08.4 last night, winning the Columbian mile at the Knights of Columbus meet, the climax of the Eastern indoor season. The time not only established a new indoor record, beating Gene Venzke's old mark of 4:10, but was the fastest mile ever run by an American, indoor or outdoors, and exceeded only by Jack Lovelock's 4:07.6 mile made in defeating Princeton's Bill Monthron last summer.

But Cunningham took little time to discuss his new record, as friends rushed to congratulate him. He was a bit put out for not hitting the clock at 4:06.

Just As Easy.

"Might just as well have done it," Cunningham said after the race. "A second faster second, quarter, and another clipped off the third quarter, and I would have had it."

"I sure wish Bill had been there," was Hargiss' reply. "Then there would have been a real foot race."

Some day the Kansan is confident he'll beat Lovelock's time. He'll graduate with a B. S. degree in June, but he'll be back next year and is looking ahead to earning a place on the 1936 Olympic team.

"I'm only 24 years old," said Glenn, "and I've got several good years ahead of me before old Father Time takes his toll."

Cunningham, who as a high school student at Elkhard, Kans., won the National Interscholastic title and several times stepped the mile in 4:30, is not just sure what he'll do when he is graduated. But he hopes to stay in Lawrence, Kans., where he can continue to train under Hargiss' watchful eye.

Is Easy to Train.

"He's by far the easiest athlete I ever had to train," said Hargiss. "He's working his way through school, but there's hardly a day when he's not working out, winter or summer."

Hargiss inherited Cunningham two years ago from Brutus Hamilton, former University of Missouri star, when the former was named head track coach.

"Hamilton told me I had a great runner," remarked Hargiss, "but Glenn has exceeded even my fondest hopes."

Cunningham, accompanied by his coach, left for Hamilton, Ontario, today, where the Kansan will compete in the 1,000-yard run in the Canadian A. A. U. games Wednesday night. He won the 2-mile there last year. His next engagement in this country will be in a special mile at the Butler University games Saturday night.

Houghton Off For Augusta Tourney

AL HOUGHTON, Kenwood professional, left last night via auto for Augusta, Ga., to participate in the Masters' tournament scheduled to start Thursday over Bobby Jones' "ideal" golf course. Fred McLeod, of Columbia, one of 15 former Open champions invited, will leave tomorrow night by train. Houghton spent yesterday resting up for the tournament. McLeod played a round over his home course.

Dr. Tommy Utz shot one of his best rounds, an 84, yesterday at Indian Spring while playing with Dr. J. C. Wineman, Leo Pass and Daniel Casey. Professional Diffenbaugh predicts Dr. Utz will break 80 within the next few months.

R. M. Brown, golf chairman at Beaver Dam Country Club, will meet with members of his committee Wednesday night to discuss plans and approve the season's schedule.

Japanese Ambassador Hirosho Saito is the latest of the celebrities to join the Kenwood Golf and Country Club. He stated yesterday that he planned to get out with other members of the legation and play considerable golf this year.

Flashes vs. Boys Club.

The Heurich Flashes and the Boys Club Varsity, both participants in the District A. A. U. basket ball tournament, will clash tonight at the Boys Club gym at 9 o'clock. All Heurich players are requested by Manager Tucker to report at 8:45.

Cards Win 3d In Row From Giants

World Champs Bow, 2-1, With All Scoring Packed in Second.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., March 18 (AP).—The St. Louis Cardinals defeated the New York Giants, 2 to 1, today for their third straight victory of the "Grapefruit League" season over the world champions. The Giants got only five hits, two of the scratch variety, off Dizzy Dean, Bill Hallahan and Bob Klinger. The Cards collected seven blows.

All the scoring came in the second inning while Dean and Freddy Fitzsimmons were on the mound. Joe Medwick opened the St. Louis inning with a double which Phil Weintraub reached but couldn't hold. After two were out, Buster Mills swatted another double and Leo Durocher singled. Weintraub's two-bagger and Stoney Jackson's single brought the Giant run

New Randolph-Macon Track Coach Reports

Ashland, Va., March 18 (AP).—Louis A. Onesty, former all-round athlete at the University of Richmond, plans to take over his duties regularly tomorrow afternoon as track coach of the Randolph-Macon Yellow Jackets.

Appointment of Onesty, announced by Randolph-Macon athletic council, is expected to boost the stock of the Yellow Jackets tracksters, which has been in a slump for several years.

America, Italy Take Honors In Finals of World Regatta

PALM BEACH, Fla., March 18 (U.P.).—America and Italy today captured world motorboat honors in the finals of the greatest international powerboat regatta ever held in this country.

Antonio Becchi, famous Italian automobile and motorboat racing driver, piloted his inboard racer, Lia V to three straight victories to win the International 12-Litre Class championship.

A spectacular accident marred today's competition. Just prior to the start of the 12-litre event, Count Theo Rossi, of the Italian team, crashed his racer Barracuda into a small outboard which wandered onto the course directly in front of the speeding Barracuda. Rossi unable to dodge the smaller craft, crashed into it.

A hole was torn in the side of the Barracuda and the outboard was overturned, throwing its occupants, the Marquis de la Gandara, of France, and a mechanic, into the water. None was injured. Rossi was forced to withdraw from the 12-litre race because of the hole in the Barracuda.

Blessed Event, Boy Valet and Other Bradley Stars to Race at Bowie Meeting

Boyle to Ask Roosevelt To Attend

Will Seek Cabinet Also for Opening Events on April 2.

Kentuckian's Horses at Florida to Be Sent North Soon.

J. H. (DICK) THOMPSON, head trainer for Col. Edward Riley Bradley of Kentucky Derby fame, wired Track Superintendent Dick Pending last night that Bill Hurley would bring on the Bradley horses now racing in Florida for the 12-day spring meeting at Bowie, which ushers in the Eastern racing season April 2.

Thompson is busy at Idle Hour Farm in Kentucky with a division of the Bradley stable, but says his employer will have capable representation at Bowie as Blessed Event, winner of four consecutive races at Miami, is among those Hurley will soon bring North for the Southern Maryland Agricultural Association's meeting next month.

Don Meade, one of the best money riders in America, will accompany the Bradley stable from Florida. Meade has been displaying good form this winter and as he is a great favorite with patrons of this track, anything he handles is certain to come in for a generous play in the pari-mutuels, which will be presided over by Mortimer M. Mahony.

Set Two Records.

Blessed Event accounted for two of the 11 records broken during the Hialeah meeting and tied one world mark. The new times for the Florida course follow:

January 25, Blessed Event (D. Meade), a mile in 1:35 4-5; January 30, George Willing, jr.'s Idle Victory (J. Gilbert), 3 furlongs (nursery course), in :33 2-5; January 31, W. Graham's Coequel (E. Litzenberger), 6 furlongs, in 1:10 1-5; February 17, W. Sachsenmaier's Pot Au Brooms (C. Corbett), a mile and a sixteenth (turf course), in 1:45 2-5; February 24, A. Hullcoat's Renowed (H. Hughes), a mile and an eighth (turf course), in 1:51 2-5; March 3, W. Adrain's Hokuao (J. Hunter), a mile and a sixteenth (turf course), in 1:45 1-5; March 3, Blessed Event (D. Meade), a mile and a quarter, in 2:02 4-5; March 3, Mrs. F. Kahn's Momo (A. Robertson), a mile and three-sixteenths, in 1:57 3-5; March 8, S. W. Labrot's Monel (L. Balaski), a mile, in 1:35 3-5; March 10, Blessed Event (D. Meade), a mile and an eighth, in 1:48 2-5 (equals world's record); March 14; S. L. Looms' Impeach (E. Eames), a mile and a sixteenth (turf course), in 1:44 3-5.

Others in Group.

In addition to Blessed Event, Trainer Hurley has hopes of winning purses with the 3-year-olds—Boy Valet, Bartering Kate, Best by Test and Beoff; the 4-year-olds—Bubbler, Broad Bill and Beefsteak.

Boy Valet, winner of the Wildwood Purse at Miami, is credited with a mile in 1:38. Back of him that day were Bitty Bit, Somebody, Pass Shot, Zulu Lad, Night's End and Sun Abbott.

Beefsteak ran one great race at Miami, finishing second to Crazy Jane in a three-quarters race run in the sizzling time of 1:10 4-5, which if repeated at Bowie would enable the Bradleyite to whip many of the high-class sprinters that will perform next month.

To Ask Roosevelt.

General Manager Joseph B. Boyle reports a generous response for clubhouse and private boxes for next month's racing. Boyle, who spent the winter in Baltimore, is endeavoring to have President Franklin D. Roosevelt and members of his Cabinet attend the opening day festivities.

If President Roosevelt can be persuaded, a special race will be run in his honor. In addition, a box to house the President will be placed to the right of the finish line so that the Nation's popular Chief Executive can get an unobstructed view of the course.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

One of the strangest rental deals in history is that in London, where the city is tenant and the crown is the landlord. Every year the ritual of yearly payment of rent is held—the city solicitor, acting for the city, pays to the King, who is represented by the King's remembrancer, a few horseshoes, some horseshoe nails, a bill hook, and a hatchet. This the crown accepts as payment for another year.

This has been going on now for 700 years—so long that nobody knows who owns the land, nobody knows who occupies it, in fact nobody knows where it is. Nevertheless, the city pays its traditional rent. The bill hook and hatchet are given for land somewhere in Shropshire, known as the "Moors," and the horseshoes and nails are for another tract of land concerning which even less is known.

The rent is nothing more than a tradition, because it is known that the crown does not own the land wherever it might be, and that the city does not occupy it—the city being able to account in other ways for all the land it rents.

Strange as it seems, the great gasoline industry of the world was first a patent medicine business. Petroleum was originally used as a cure-all. Later, when the well shown above was drilled, it furnished as its most important product kerosene for lighting purposes. Gasoline was a worthless by-product.

with Bill Bennings.

Dear Al: Tropical Park, March 18.

Here's a few statistics on the Hialeah meeting . . . Earl Porter was the leading jockey with 40 winners . . . Gilbert and Litzenberger tied for second with 31 . . . and Meade's 27 gave him fourth place . . . George Ogle was the leading owner with 12 winners . . . A. A. Baroni was next with 11 . . . Hirsch Jacobs and George Phillips were top trainers with 14 winners each . . . 82 horses were claimed, a new record for the course . . . the old mark was 70 . . . 610 horses raced at the track . . . and 108 jockeys rode . . . but only 41 won races . . . of the 194 trainers on the scene, 114 saddled winners . . . 143 owners won races . . . 11records were broken . . . 23 jockeys were suspended . . . and Starter Cassidy fined six jockeys for disobedience at the post . . . nine horses were disqualified . . . and a new deal starts here tomorrow. BILL.

First race—Sequoia will find the shorter distance tomorrow to his advantage, and I see no reason why we should not start the day with a winner. Suspicious is better than those recent poor efforts. Jane Ellen has a fighting chance.

Second race—Dijonette ran a fair race last out and the daughter of Westwick has had a fast trial. Hunter will ride and I'm taking this one to defeat my old friend, Dornoch. Meloy to take care of the others.

Third race—Foreign Lady appears best suited of the group of 4-year-old fillies booked to go the four furlongs. Meade is likely to ride and he should get the most out of this mount. Finished fast in that recent effort. Ever True and Polly Hundred to complete the picture.

Fourth race—Aunt Flor gets in this with only 95 pounds and understand that Litzenberger will do the booting. Can't see anything in this field defeating her. Granny's Trade won impressively over at Hialeah and will be dangerous here. Wedding Ring for the show.

Fifth race—Big Beau is the logical choice here. Ran a sizzler last out and that effort repeated should take care of this brand. Spicon is a possible major surprise. Stealingaway to lead the others to the wire.

Sixth race—Pardee threw up the sponge in the last few jumps over at Hialeah. Porter, as usual, will ride. I'm going to try to make him stick to the guns tomorrow. Renewed and Two Tricks have an edge on the rest.

Seventh race—Apprehensive gets the Bennings call in the final. Raced well at the other track and is another Porter mount. My Kentucky for the place and St. Christopher to show.

Puppy Trials Planned For Today Near Luray

Luray, Va., March 18 (AP).—The Page Valley Puppy trials will be held on the Atwood farm between Luray and Rileyville tomorrow, with entrants from the District of Columbia, Maryland and Virginia. The all-age stake also will be run. The drawings of these two stakes was to be held tonight.

The field is a new one, but was chosen because of the prevalence of birds. A number of quail also have been placed by the commission of game and inland fisheries. Ernest Mead, of Richmond, and Claude Strickley, of Vaucleuse, are judges for the events.

G. Freeman Pollock, of Skyland and Washington, is president of the organization, and Harry Bradford, of Luray, is secretary.

Dusek "Haters" Have Innings Thursday

Rude Rudy Likely to Take Licking from 'Champ' Jim Browning.

THURSDAY night's rassle fracas at the Auditorium between Title Claimant Jim Browning and Rude Rudy Dusek seems to have whet the appetites of the cash customers, who are looking forward with great anticipation at the opportunity of seeing Rudy soundly trounced and then flopped on his back. Time was when Rude Rudy was a local hero; in fact, he took three beatings here from Jimmy Londos, also a title claimant, with the fans weeping and moaning with and for him. But those were the days before Rudy was classed as rude and villianous. Now he is rated No. 1 on their "hate" list, with Brother Ernie running him a close second.

While there is no doubt but what Londos shellacked Rudy completely in these bouts, yet the Gorgeous Greek is not nearly as colorful as is Browning. The latter, recognized as world champ in several States, plows right in to his foe and is willing to absorb punishment while doling it out, making the coming melee loom as a much more promising one from a competitive standpoint—for it is generally admitted that, when it comes to roughing up a foe, Rudy is a past master.

Good Battle Promised.

There is hardly a Chinaman's chance of Dusek winning, which will be good news to his many admirers (?), but he can be counted upon to put up a great battle before being made to look like a propeller in the middle of Browning's airplane leg-scissors.

Having seen Rudy and Ernie Dusek in action, the addicts had the idea that Dusek and "rough stuff" were synonymous, but little brother Emil showed that he is a clean rassler unless forced to turn villain in self-defense and fans will be allowed to pass judgment on still another Dusek—Joe—who takes on Henry Piers in one of the preliminaries Thursday.

Gus Sonnenberg, the veteran flying tackler, who once was hailed as champion, gets a place in the spotlight when he takes on George Manich in the semifinal, while bouts between Doc Len Hall and Eli Fischer and Sid Westrich and George Calza complete the card.

Through Edgren's Eyes—

District A. A. U. Title Court Tourney Final Rounds Near

Play to Be Resumed Tomorrow Night on Roosevelt High Floor With Three Promising Games Listed; Boys Club Plays Saranacs.

SURVIVORS of one of the most hectic District A. A. U. basketball tournaments in history will rest oars tonight, following two weeks of intensive warfare on the Macfarland and Roosevelt hardwood.

Tomorrow night, the battle in the event sponsored by The Post will be resumed, with St. Martin's meeting Jewish Community Center in a 130-pound semifinals game at 7:30 o'clock; Twin Oaks Black Hawks engaging Stewart's Pharmacy in the quarterfinals of the 145-pound division at 8:30, and Boys' Club of Washington encountering the Saranacs in the unlimited class at 9:30. These games, as well as all others from now on, will be staged on the Roosevelt High court.

Wednesday night, Heurich Flashes and Olmsted Grill meet at 7:30 in the 145-pound class, while in the other two games, both unlimited, Bureau of Investigation faces Mount Vernon, and the crack George Washington University frosh tossers battle Congress Heights.

Title Clashes Near.

Championships in the seven classes will be decided in the next ten days, with indications that some of the best play in the tournament will be brought out with the semifinals and titular contests.

In the unlimited group, Trinity became the first of the favorites to reach the semifinals by walloping a fighting Rockville team, 48 to 27, Saturday night. Burdette Cogar and Waverly Wheeler supplying the scoring punch with 14 and 10 points, respectively.

And here is the way your other quarterfinal games might wind up, although, of course, you never can tell.

Provided they continue to click, the Saranacs, with Bill Burke, Bob Smith, Downey Rice, Gene Swift and Jack Moulton, are expected to beat the Boys Club, a strong and husky team that played both good and indifferent basket ball against Company F, Hyattsville, barely managing to win, 29 to 27.

Bureau of Investigation, 1933 finalists, has displayed the best teamwork and all-around passing and shooting ability of all the unlimited teams. It should decision Mount Vernon, although this fellow, Ray Garber, who scored 23 points in two games, is mighty dangerous, and is the man the Sleuths must keep well guarded.

Boasts Good Subs, Too.

The B. of I. not only has the best of the subs in the unlimited class, but has five able-bodied men in Capt. Walter Morris, Forest Burgess, Joe Lynch, Ed Colliflower and Willis Fischer, the regular starting five that dealt destruction to the hopes of Company E, Engineers, and Farm Credit Administration.

So, it looks like Trinity vs. Saranacs, and B. of I. vs. George Washington, in the semifinals.

St. Stephen's, Heurich Flashes and Olmsted Grill have reached the 145-pound semifinals, and Twin Oaks Black Hawks are expected to run true to form by defeating Stewart's Pharmacy in their game tomorrow night.

Bovello Plumbers went into the 130-pound semifinals last week by winning from the Washington Grays and Boys Club Fyfes, and will probably meet St. Martin's in the finals. The Saints, former victors in the 100-pound and 115-pound A. A. U. championships, hope to add to their laurels with a 130-pound victory this season.

Two Finals This Week.

Roosevelt High Lightweights and Ebell's Grill have reached the finals in the 115-pound class, and Boys Club Americans and Y Hawks are in the finals of the 100-pound race. They are to settle their feuds this week.

The only three girls' games of last week went to Jewish Community Center, Rockville and Bethesda-Chevy Chase High. Al's is slated to meet J. C. C. and Rockville will face Bethesda. In defeating the Red Flashes, Rockville's lassies looked extremely good with their forwards shooting deftly and their guards covering up equally as brilliant.

With a nominal fee of 25 cents charged, the basket ball public is offered high-class entertainment for a small admission. Three games will be the order each night.

Boatmen Hold Sports Night At Club

Boxing and Wrestling Are Included on Program at Alexandria.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., March 18 (Spl.).—The Old Dominion Boat Club will sponsor a smoker tomorrow night at the club. Six three-round bouts have been arranged by the athletic committee.

The leather pushers will be representatives of the Alexandria Boys Club and a District boxing team.

Tumbling exhibitions and several wrestling matches also are on schedule.

Alexandria High School baseball candidates will resume practice tomorrow afternoon. Coach Given has a problem that calls for real ability in regard to settling the question as to who will hold down the second base job. Brewer, Ewald and Tash are staging a heated battle for the position. A new man, Paul Shu, who was expected to hold down a garden position, has been shifted to first base.

The remainder of the team probably will shape up as follows: Catcher, Chillcotte; pitchers, Titcomb, Hammersley and Nugent; shortstop, Godfrey; third base, McMenniman; center field, Fritter; Collins and Pitchers Nugent and Titcomb will alternate in the outer defense when not tossing them up.

Frederick Fete Set as Tribute To J. D. Baker

Ritchie Among Notables to Honor Banker on 80th Birthday.

Frederick, Md., March 18 (Spl.).—Frederick's first citizen, Joseph D. Baker, banker, philanthropist and churchman, will be given a subscription testimonial dinner at the Francis Scott Key Hotel, April 2, in honor of his eightieth birthday.

Friends of Mr. Baker from all parts of Maryland and adjoining States, prominent in financial, civic, industrial and religious life, have accepted invitations to attend.

The speakers will include Gov. Ritchie, the Right Rev. Edward Trail Helfenstein, Episcopal Bishop of Maryland; Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad; Dr. Joseph H. Apple, president of Hood College, and Chief Judge Hammond Urner. Folger McKinsey, formerly of this city, now of the Baltimore Sun, will read a poem. The Rev. G. Ellis Williams, pastor of Calvary Methodist Episcopal Church, chairman of the citizens committee in charge of the dinner, will read a tribute to Mr. Baker from his fellow citizens. James H. Gambrill will be toastmaster.

The committee in charge in addition to Dr. Williams consists of Dr. Apple, Robert E. and William T. Delaplaine, publishers of the News-Post; the Rev. Henri L. G. Kieffer, pastor of the Evangelical Reformed Church; former Judge of the Circuit Court John S. Newman, and David C. Winebrenner 3d, Secretary of State.

Mr. Baker is chairman of the board of the Citizens National Bank and is regarded as one of Maryland's foremost bankers. In 1907 he was strongly urged for the Democratic nomination for Governor. A stanch prohibitionist, he threw aside all chances for the nomination when he declined membership in an influential Democratic club in Baltimore because liquor was sold on the premises. Despite his views on prohibition, he and Gov. Ritchie, the latter a wet champion, long have been close friends.

One of the guests will be John Charles Thomas, member of the Metropolitan Opera Company, who will sing as his contribution toward the tribute to Mr. Baker. Mr. Thomas is a Marylander.

Service at 'Pie Counter' Hit By Charlottesville Democrats

G. O. P. Is Getting All the Patronage, Is Charge; Change Sought.

Charlottesville, Va., March 18 (Spl.).—Holding that the faithful of the Jeffersonian party are not getting just deserts in patronage, the Charlottesville Democratic committee yesterday invited the Albemarle committee to meet with it to talk the situation over.

Committeemen made no bones about expressing publicly their belief that Democrats had been unfairly treated in the distribution of jobs. And where are the jobs? They are, was the answer, in the hands of the G. O. P.

"It is easier," said one, "for a Republican than a Democrat to get a job. It is unfair."

Members of the Young Democratic Club here will be invited to the meeting of the two committees, it was said.

The city committee also set April 9 as the date for a municipal convention at which Democratic candidates for the two places on the council which become vacant this year will be selected. Ward meetings to pick delegates to this convention were scheduled for April 2.

Chemist Tells Of Substitutes For Narcotics

Experiments Designed to Alleviate Pain and End Addiction.

Williamsburg, Va., March 18 (Spl.).—Dr. Linden Small, associate research chemist at the University of Virginia, hopes to announce to the world soon substitutes for cocaine, morphine and other habit-forming drugs that will have the same effect in the alleviation of pain.

Speaking before the Virginia section of the American Chemical Society and the Hampton Roads Chemist Club at William and Mary College here last night, he said his findings had met with success at the University of Michigan when applied to animals. He stated they would be tried on human beings at Leavenworth Prison in the near future.

He declared he hoped to produce substitutes for the narcotics which would relieve pain without subjecting the user to the danger of becoming an addict. He said he had succeeded in breaking down certain molecules by changing the atomic arrangements which had produced changes in characteristics of habit-forming compounds.

Col. George C. Cabell, of Norfolk, spoke on "Building Up the Human Molecule." He said his method would produce cheerfulness, kindliness, thoughtfulness, tenderness and hopefulness by producing a molecule of happiness.

The two organizations held an afternoon meeting, followed by a dinner last night. The afternoon session was presided over by Dr. L. B. Hitchcock, chairman of the Virginia section of the American Chemical Society, and the night session by W. F. Lawrence, president of the Hampton Roads club.

There's A Reason

WHEN a large number of people are moving in one direction it is not only human nature but a worth-while idea to follow them!

Judy O'Grady and the Colonel's lady are, in truth, "sisters under the skin." What interests one is almost certain to interest the other. And so, when you follow the crowd you invariably find something that interests YOU, too.

Curiosity may draw you first, but did you ever follow a crowd without finding something interesting at the destination? . . . Of course you didn't! . . . Possibly it was a fire, an accident, or some person of prominence whom all wanted to see. In any event, you found that the attraction which held the interest of the crowd also had a personal appeal for you!

Copper Sales Slightly Active In Past Week

Tin Prices Climb as Lead Is Unchanged; Zinc Remains Dull.

New York, March 18 (AP).—Copper consumers were moderately active buyers of metal this week at the unchanged basis of 8 cents for electrolytic as a result of increased movement of products from brass and wire mills.

Purchases extended into the second quarter. Although some disappointment was expressed in the trade over adjournment of copper code hearings at Washington, with the Administration suggesting a revised form for consideration next week, it had little market influence.

Unofficial statistics for February reflected a substantial decrease in North and South American refined stocks.

Tin Prices Advance.

Although tin prices advanced about ¾-cent per pound, buyers withdrew and the market reacted later in the week. Sales of metal for the period were small. In the meantime, tin plate mill operations were said to continue at around 80 per cent of capacity.

Lead smelters reported a fair volume of business at unchanged prices. Buying from various consuming trades was said to reflect business improvement in different industries.

Part of the demand was said to be in expectation of seasonal improvement in the paint industry. Demand was still centered principally on prompt requirements.

Zinc Remains Dull.

Zinc remained dull with a few more sellers said to be meeting recent slight concessions available elsewhere for prompt metal.

Limited demand was credited partly to reports that galvanizing plants had not increased operations in proportion to the recent improvement in other divisions of the steel industry.

Antimony advanced further on additional gains in the Chinese and London markets. Little or no business developed at the higher levels.

While the national average of steel production experienced a slight recession in the past week as a result of lessened demand from the automotive industry and miscellaneous consumers, Eastern plants were increasing production owing to expanding railroad releases.

The labor situation in the Detroit area was being watched for possible further effect on steel demand. Finished prices were unchanged, but scrap weakened. Pig iron shipments varied in different districts, with prices steady.

Head of A. F. of L. Can Not Escape Responsibility for Undermining Recovery Program if Labor Troubles End in Automobile Strike.

By Ralph West Robey.

Everyone recognizes that virtually the only issue at stake in the automobile labor dispute is unionization. It is a question of whether the American Federation of Labor should be permitted to organize the industry and become the spokesman for the workers. So far the companies, with success, have opposed this move and have insisted that the labor provisions of the NRA were being fulfilled by having labor speak through company unions. The A. F. of L. charges that this is not adequate, that company unions always are dominated by the employers and that unless it is permitted to come in and organize the workers they can not consider that the rights of labor will be protected.

To those who do not have deep feelings on the question of unionization, it is probable that such a dispute scarcely can justify endangering the whole recovery program. For it must be clear that this is exactly what it does do. If the dispute is not settled, and a strike is called, the industry which has been the leader in recovery to date will be closed down, to a greater or lesser extent, just at the peak of its production period. Further, it is probable, according to those close to the labor problem, that if we have a strike in the automobile field it will spread to the steel industry. And if one takes automobiles and steel out of the present recovery, there will be little left.

Statistics Indicate Part Industry Has Contributed.

Just how little would remain of improvement is an open question. Some indication of what the automobile industry has done in the way of helping business through increasing employment and raising wages, nevertheless, may be gained by looking at the data gathered by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. This organization includes most of the important producers with the exception of Ford. Its statistics, accordingly, are unusually inclusive.

They show that in February of this year their members were employing 183,000 workers, ascompared with an average of 198,000 in 1929. When allowance is made for seasonal variations, this still leaves considerable to be desired, but even so it is a remarkable showing. With an industry whose production is some 50 per cent below the immediate predepression level the employment of over 90 per cent as many laborers as it had in 1929 reflects a willingness to cooperate in spreading work. On this point alone, therefore, it is evident that the labor unions can have no legitimate grounds for complaint.

Showing on Wage Averages Even Better Than on Hours.

The second great factor to be considered in appraising the contribution of an industry to recovery, and the justification for dissatisfaction on the part of labor, is the amount it pays in wages. Here the figures are even more favorable to the automobile industry than those just given on employment. According to the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, the average earnings of motor factory employes in the first quarter of this year will be $29.82. This compares with $32.74 in 1929, and $27.28 in 1930.

In view of these facts it is something less than accurate for William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, to try to throw the entire blame for the trouble upon the automobile manufacturers. It may be that the employers have failed in many particulars to comply with the spirit of the NRA in regard to labor, that the workers have a real basis for complaint. At the same time it must be evident that if the recovery program is undermined through a widespread strike at this time, a large share of the responsibility must rest squarely on the shoulders of the head of the American Federation of Labor.

Stocks Retain Firm Tone in Face of News

Morgenthau's Silver Stand Is Weathered; Signs of Strength Noted.

New York, March 18.—In its weekly review of business and financial conditions the Wall Street Journal says: Stock market sentiment blew hot and cold by turns during the past week. At the outset there was quiet but persistent strength in the public utility and railroad issues, giving the market the kind of leadership which Wall street has been seeking at this stage of the recovery.

In spite of the possibilities of widespread labor disturbances, sentiment showed signs of improving decidedly and the market took on a broader and firmer appearance than in many weeks.

Secretary of Treasury Morgenthau threw a bombshell into the midst of the silver speculators on Thursday when he told members of the House coinage committee that he was opposed to doing anything for silver at this time.

Metal Breaks Heavily.

The metal broke 140 to 170 points on that announcement and the silver mining stocks gave ground rapidly. For a time the selling spread to other issues and the whole market was adversely affected. But the Secretary of Treasury also said that business was getting better week by week, and gave this as his reason for taking no action on silver. Hence, this localized the disturbance to the silver group.

The bullish implications in these remarks were appreciated on second thought. In spite of the critical labor conference at Washington, which was reaching an acute stage near the end of the week, the stock market maintained a quiet and firm tone. Several issues showed a tendency to push forward quietly.

On the whole, the securities markets showed remarkable calmness in the face of critical developments which ordinarily might be expected to produce liquidation if any important weak stock was overhanging the market. The prospect of higher wages and shorter hours in many industries was not considered alarming, for it was generally assumed that increased volume of business and the greater purchasing power created would offset the increased costs.

Uptrend in Steel.

The uptrend in steel operations was interrupted with indicated production at 46.2 per cent, compared with 47.7 per cent in the preceding week. Since the beginning of the year there had been good increases, the first interruption coming for the week beginning January 22, but the advancing tendency was resumed on January 29, and was maintained until the current report.

Several factors contributed to the slowing down, but the outstanding influence was a lessened demand from the automobile industry, reflecting the caution among motor car makers because of threats of labor troubles. It is not likely that the automotive industry will be very active until there is evidence of normal operating conditions, without interference from labor.

| | High. | Low. | Last. | Chge. |
|---|---|---|---|---|

Campus Comment

By Lewis F. Atchison.

FROM column eight over here it appears to us that Georgetown stuck out the chin just a trifle too far and too eagerly when it okayed that football game with Maryland next season. Naturally we're glad it went through—now we'll have an honest-to-goodness domestic argument to look forward to when the chestnuts begin to fall, but the outlook is powerfully dreary for Georgetown. At least that's the way it looks to us. Georgetown, we understand, isn't even worried.

A guy who knows a guy who claims to know something about Maryland says that the 1934 collection of gridiron talent is pay dirt. This guy who claims to know something about Maryland vows that Jack Faber is blessed with the best squad to sport the black and gold since the days of Grove, Adams, et al. Maryland, this guy claims, will smite the Hoyas a mighty blow—a blow that will be heard around the District for years and generations to come. It also may end the series at one game. Georgetown must arrange for a reputation before the Aggies will seriously consider an annual game.

Georgetown, as noted above, displays no outward sign of emotion. Jack Hagerty will have little more than a football, 11 suits and some ambitious but rather lean lads to fill them, but he'll probably turn out a good, tough eleven, which may not win, but will not be lost in the rush. Hagerty's funny that way. And looking at it from a closer angle (column seven) it's one of those red-hot rivalries where reputations mean nothing, where the underdog may be on the bottom, but with a football tucked under his arm over the goal-line for the winning touchdown.

The younger brothers of Conny Cronin (Harford), and Bob Archer (Jack) will enter Maryland next fall. Recently the pair accumulated 21 points for Belair High School in its game with Mount Rainier, and both happen to be better-than-average trackmen. Archer hung up a new 440-yard record in the State scholastic meet last summer.

I am reliably informed that the 1932-33 Central High School quintet intact will enter a Southern college this autumn. From an equally reliable source comes word that Joe Keegin, of Eastern, is definitely slated for Holy Cross.

Georgetown's game with Richmond next season will not be the first between the two. Back in 1900 the Hoyas spanked the Spiders, 86-0. But it won't be like that next October.

Speaking of Georgetown in the good old days, G. Warfield Simpson, a tailor with headquarters at Twelfth and F streets, advertised that he would give absolutely free a pair of trousers (made to order) to every member of the first eleven making a touchdown in championship games. They tell me the boys were well supplied with pegtops, but it appears that there was a scarcity of coats. He was no sucker!

After annoying the sports department for weeks and weeks with Pitt pep talks, Chick Kenny finally was silenced by Bill McCormick's observation that "Pitt is a horrid word."

Two of the sweetest collegiate boxers we were privileged to lay eyes on this winter, Mascarro, Georgetown's 115-pounder, and Benitez, Catholic U.'s 135-pounder, popped up in the intramural finals at Maryland. We felt just a trifle sorry for both before their bouts, but our sympathy was absolutely wasted. We'll hear more from both lads next season. They're smart, game, clever boxers and Benitez has a punch that police would call a dangerous weapon.

Speaking of the 'murals, Don Pritchard, who won the 165-pound scrap for Georgetown, hadn't been inside of a gym more than twice this winter. He had just stowed away a juicy tenderloin steak when summoned forth from retirement to substitute for an injured battler—and what a substitute he turned out to be!

High School Highlights.

ONE of the big reasons for Chief Charley Guyon's uncurbed optimism over Eastern's baseball prospects lies in the return of Joe Mills, his star shortstop of last year, whose .714 batting average for the 1933 interhigh series was nearly 200 points better than that of any regular in the Capital. The fleet-footed infielder was lifted from eighth place in the lineup to the cleanup position before the season ended as the result of his sensational clouting.

Chief Charley thinks it would not be a bad idea to build his attack with Joe as the mainstay in the fourth rung again, but in the field here may switch his protege to the hot corner. Mills has a powerful arm and gets the ball away fast—hence the possible assignment to third.

With Carl Mills, member of the chief's receiving staff last year, a favorite to grab off an infield berth, probably at second, it looks as though a Lincoln Park Mills Brothers act is assured. Carl, one of the best punters at Eastern in years, injured his leg during the football campaign and is just beginning to get back in top-notch condition.

Johnnie Ahearn, secretary of the District Umpires Association and a sandlot umpire around town for six or seven years, will not be the next interhigh arbiter, despite rumors to the contrary. You can pick any one of the following reasons:

Johnnie's brother, Davis, plays outfield for Roosevelt; certain high school officials say Johnnie is still not yet qualified for the heavy responsibility that the interhigh job calls for and, Johnnie hasn't made application, to date, for the position.

Athletic Director Lynn Woodworth of Roosevelt is pretty well concerned over whether the school's expensive new athletic field will be in condition to permit its use before spring season history. The freshly laid sod is taking a long time to dry out and even approach solidity.

Miller Soccerists Held to 0-to-0 Tie

New York Avenue Team Upsets Recreation Dope.

Miller Furniture had by far the better of the game, but failed to overcome the defense offered by Harding and T. Clark, who received lots of assistance from Aquilina and A. Clark. Millers most successful players were Tamagni, T. Wellens and Jones.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — Deductive Reasoning on the Defense — By Harry J. Tuthill

I CERTAINLY ADMIRE THAT NICE WOMAN NEXT-DOOR FOR LETTING ME KNOW TODAY HOW MUCH SHE DISLIKED HER HUSBAND'S IDEA OF POPPING OUT INTO THE HALL WHEN THAT STRANGE WOMAN CAME HERE ABOUT BAXTER.
SHE'S BEEN TEARING INTO HIM ALL EVENING ABOUT SOMETHING. HEAR THEM!
SWEET, I AFFIRM, I INSIST THAT I AM NOT INTERFERING IN THE NEIGHBOR'S BUSINESS BY MERELY—
SWEET, MY DEDUCTIONS TELL ME THOSE FOLKS HAVE A STRANGE BOY IN THEIR HOME AND—YOUR DEDUCTIONS WON'T TELL YOU HALF AS MUCH AS I WILL IF YOU TRY TO MIX INTO THOSE PEOPLE'S AFFAIRS.
BABE, IF MY KNOWLEDGE OF DEDUCTIVE REASONING CAN HELP GEORGE—
YOUR KNOWLEDGE! HA, WHAT A WONDERFUL THING IT WOULD BE IF THOSE DETECTIVE SCHOOLS YOU'RE ALWAYS JOINING GAVE A LESSON OR TWO ON MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS.

JOE JINKS, Featuring Dynamite Dunn — By Way of Illustration — By Llanuza

WITH DYNAMITE'S OPPONENTS CHOSEN, JOE GETS TO THINKING ABOUT IN WHAT ORDER THEY WILL FIGHT DYNAMITE... HE WANTS THE TOUGHEST ONE FIRST, SO THAT DYNAMITE CAN BE AT HIS BEST AGAINST HIM...
Reg. U. S. Pat. Off. © 1934 by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.
THIS GUY KARL THE BUTCHER'S GOT ME WORRIED... IF HE'S REALLY TOUGH, IT'D BE BEST FOR DYNAMITE TO FIGHT HIM FIRST, WHILE DYNAMITE'S FRESH... I THINK I'LL CALL UP CLIFF LACEY AN' GET HIS O.K. ON THE IDEA
CLIFF?... THIS IS JOE ... SAY... JUST TO PROVE WHAT WE THINK O' THAT GUY KARL YOU SAY IS SO TOUGH... DYNAMITE'S WILLIN' TO TAKE HIM ON FIRST
OH, NO, JOE ... I CAN'T SEE THAT AT ALL
WHY NOT?... IT'S A BREAK FOR THE OTHER GUY.... DYNAMITE WON'T BE WARMED UP.. HE'LL BE COMIN' INTO THE RING COLD
WHADD'YE MEAN, COLD?
I MEAN COLD... YOU KNOW... THE WAY KARL THE BUTCHER'S GO'IN' OUT O' THE RING!

THE GUMPS — Lost, Strayed or Stolen

SHE WOULDN'T RUN AWAY SHE SAID SHE WAS SO HAPPY HERE—
I CAN'T STAND IT— WE'VE GOT TO DO SOMETHING— CALL THE POLICE— I'LL LOSE MY MIND IF ANYTHING HAS HAPPENED TO THAT CHILD—
WE'VE TURNED THE ENTIRE HOUSE UPSIDE DOWN— THERE'S NOT A TRACE OF HER—SHE'S VANISHED AS IF BY MAGIC—
SHE'S NOT UNDER THERE—

DICK TRACY — The Scrubwoman

Walt Mason, Himself

Crook-of-the-Month

The crook-of-the-month's arrested, and now for his sins he pays; the law, that has long been bested, is getting its own these days. The bandits who used to giggle at judgment are being canned; they're jailed, and in vain they wriggle, their punishment is at hand. The gangsters who went a-ganging won't go on that trail again; the big iron doors are clanging that shut them inside the pen. The loins of the law are girded, it's getting right down to tacks, and scoundrels are being herded in prisons and kindred shacks. The jurists upon their benches are handing down stern decrees, and toughs, with their molls and wenches, are shaky around the knees. For years it was most disturbing, the way that the law fell down, it failed in the work of curbing the crime that upset the town. The criminals laughed and tittered when threats of the law were made, and voters were much embittered, and some of them were afraid. But lately the law's been busy, it's putting up hay at last, and gangsters are feeling dizzy, they're going to jail so fast. The crook-of-the-month's arrested, you've seen in the public prints, the fellow who smirked and jested at law and its threats and hints. Which shows we are truly moving to better and higher planes: conditions are all improving when law on the gangster gains.

Father Sought For Killing His FourDaughters

Mother Kept in Ignorance of Hammer Slaying of Children.

New York, March 18 (AP).—The hammer-slaying of his four small children led police on a painstaking search of the Bronx today for John McHale, 31, CWA laborer, who disappeared shortly before the bodies were found yesterday by his wife.

As special squads of plainclothesmen pressed their search, McHale's hysterical wife was being cared for at the home of a neighboring cousin, unaware her children all were dead.

Mrs. McHale returned home with milk for the girls, after having had an altercation with her husband, and found her 18-month-old daughter, Agnes, in a blood-stained crib.

Nearby lay Helen, 4; Margaret, 5; and Anna, 6. Helen already was dead, although her mother did not realize it, and the three others died later in a hospital. All had been hit on the head with a 2-pound carpenter's hammer.

Today Mrs. McHale pleaded vainly to be taken to the hospital to see her baby, Agnes, whom she believed seriously injured. Owing to her condition, she was kept in ignorance of the deaths.

McHale and his wife quarreled over whether they should attend a St. Patrick's Day dance, she told police. She told him she could not go because there would be no one to stay with the children.

A neighbor told of seeing McHale leave the tenement, without hat or overcoat, after his wife had gone to the store.

Attacking and Defensive Bidding.

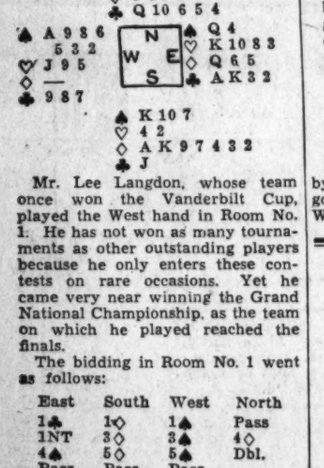
One of the features that makes a team-of-four contest of surpassing interest is a comparison of the varying results secured with the same cards, dependent upon the temperament of the players involved. In one of the most interesting hands at the Grand National Tournament, held recently in New York by the United States Bridge Association, a noted member of a team-of-four had an opportunity to display his splendid aggressive bidding while the other half of the team were demonstrating their skill as defensive players.

East Dealer
Both sides vulnerable



Mr. Lee Langdon, whose team once won the Vanderbilt Cup, played the West hand in Room No. 1. He has not won as many tournaments as other outstanding players because he only enters these contests on rare occasions. Yet he came very near winning the Grand National Championship, as the team on which he played reached the finals.

| East | South | West | North |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1♣ | 1◇ | 1♠ | Pass |
| 1NT | 3◇ | 3♠ | 4◇ |
| 4♠ | 5◇ | 5♠ | Dbl. |
| Pass | Pass | Pass | |

Mr. Langdon's five-spade bid was very fine. He could have made a Forcing pass, but the bidding and distribution of the hand indicated that there was a much more than even chance of making a vulnerable game with this hand, for which a possible set of the opponents would not sufficiently compensate. His judgment was warranted by the result, although it required a very fine player to make the contract.

North led the Knave of diamonds, which Mr. Langdon trumped, and then a small spade was led up to the Queen in the Dummy. South won the trick and played another diamond. West ruffed and, realizing that after drawing trumps he would have trouble in getting back into his hand for a heart finesse, played a small heart immediately, finessing the eight in the Dummy, which held. Now the eight of spades was finessed and the last trump drawn. Then another heart finesse enabled Mr. Langdon to set up the fourth heart in the Dummy for the discard of a losing club.

| East | South | West | North |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1♣ | Pass | 1♠ | Pass |
| 1NT | Pass | 2♠ | Pass |
| 3♠ | 4◇ | 4♠ | 5◇ |
| Dbl. | Pass | Pass | Pass |

Walter Malowan in the South position and his partner, Sydney Rusinow, playing on the same team with Lee Langdon, bid this hand exceedingly well. South's delayed diamond bid induced the opponents to double him instead of going to five spades, while Rusinow, holding the North hand, read South's bid perfectly, and without hesitation raised him to five diamonds. The doubled five-diamond contract was made because West opened a club. A heart lead would have set the contract one trick. Thus, the runner-up team made a doubled, vulnerable game contract in both rooms.

TOMORROW'S HAND
South, Dealer
Both sides vulnerable

The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Radio Waves and Ripples

ARTURO TOSCANINI and the New York Philharmonic-Symphony celebrate Mr. Toscanini's sixty-seventh birthday Sunday, Mr. Toscanini by speaking on the radio for the first time, the orchestra by playing Brahms' Symphony No. 2 in D major and Franck's Symphony in D minor.

Also, during this concert the campaign of Mr. Toscanini and the Philharmonic for $500,000 to guarantee the orchestra's life for the next there years reaches a climax, Mr. Toscanini having agreed to send to every contributor a personal acknowledgement and an autographed rotogravure picture of himself.

Said Maestro Toscanini of the fund gathering:

"The Nation has a moral obligation to save the Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra. Previously it was the duty of New York City to insure the future of its oldest and most vital possessions. But today, by reason of the magic of radio, its field of usefulness has been extended and it belongs to the Nation. We now appeal to every music lover and radio owner to contribute his or her bit in return for the pleasure the orchestra has provided in the past and in anticipation of the musical benefits to come."

IF you can't get out the day they move the Calvert Street Bridge 80 feet into Rock Creek Park, tune in one of the N. B. C. stations. National will have an announcer on the bridge to describe bridge-moving from the pedestrian angle, another in the park for the moving proper and a third interviewing bridge-movers to find out how they feel about it.

WMAL Breakfast Club President Donald Douglas has decided to widen club membership to include members' pets.

First to be initiated today will be two alligators owned by the children of N. B. C. Vice-President Frank Russell and Douglas' dog.

Lacking a particularly broad knowledge of animal noises and not being adept at imitation anyway, Douglas will bark a couple of times as a sign of initiation and let it go at that.

FROM the script of the last National Park Service broadcast on N. B. C. we have dug up what we think should be a lesson to the S. P. C. A. people who carry being nice to animals too far.

We quote from a dialogue by Dr. H. C. Bryant and H. A. Tolson, assistant directors of the National Park Service.

"Look at those woodchucks! They are taking food right from the hand of that little boy. * * * I suppose you know how tame the bears have become, even the grizzlies."

The Federal Radio Commission's getting pretty tough on the boys who try to operate broadcasting stations without going through the formality of obtaining a license.

Judson Morris and J. A. Strauss, of Lexington, Ky., were the last to find it out. A Federal judge gave them prison terms.

The radio-press war still rages. New England, refusing to abide by the provisions of the agreement governing broadcasting of news in Washington and most sections of the country, has set up a news-gathering organization of its own—the Yankee Network News Service.

FRANCES LONGFORD, presented to show that she'd probably make a real house party a lot more interesting than the one a toothpaste manufacturer is paying for on N. B. C. Saturday nights.

Columbia's experiment with the same thing was hardly what one would have called successful. Newspapers under such circumstances have the unpleasant habit of withdrawing programs from publication.

"I'm terribly domestic," explains Miss Rea (Virginia Rea, N. B. C. singer). "My own home interests me very much. I don't even drive a car, and I'm not a bit athletic. I guess I'm just old-fashioned."

Surely not as bad as all that, Miss Rea.

His instructor in English at the University of Indiana made Hill want to work on the New York Sun by using that paper in his course.

Following graduation, Hill went to work on an Indianapolis paper, saved a hundred dollars, came to New York and made such a nuisance of himself around the Sun office that they put him to work.

CCC Men to Join Forest Service

90,000 to Protect Trees, Grow New Timber.

The Forest Service of the Department of Agriculture on April 1 will take over supervision of the work of 200,000 of the 300,000 employes of the Civilian Conservation Corps, Robert Fechner, director of emergency conservation work, announced yesterday.

The men and boys will be employed on National, State and private forest lands and soil erosion projects.

Of the 1,468 CCC camps, 1,010 will be operated during the "third enrollment period." Approximately 90,000 men will be utilized on the 162,000,000 acres of National forest lands, safeguarding trees and growing forests.

Britain's Sweet Tooth Runs Big Sugar Bill

London, March 18 (AP).—Britain's sweet tooth has cost the government more than $200,000,000 since 1924 in the form of the beet sugar subsidy alone—but the nation still buys three pounds of sugar abroad for every pound produced at home.

Unforeseen high acreage and yield have made the amount voted for the 1933 crop, $14,500,000, insufficient, and the House of Commons has just passed a supplementary estimate of $2,250,000 to make up the deficiency.

New Clew May Mean Victory At Last Over Elusive Germs

Trail of "Filterable Virus" Is Found by Doctor.

Cambridge, Mass., March 18 (AP). A new clew to what happens inside some types of diseased human cells, a possible new step toward conquering the mysterious "filterable virus" diseases, is announced at Harvard University.

The discovery may give scientists a hint to the nature of the filterable viruses, which cause many serious diseases but have defied all efforts to stop their ravages because they can not be isolated like ordinary germs.

Dr. Henry Pinkerton and Dr. G. M. Hass of Harvard Medical School made the discovery. It is described by Dr. Pinkerton in a report to the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

The "filterable viruses" are called "filterable" because they are too small to be caught even in the microscopic holes of porcelain filters that rap most germs. They cause such diseases as smallpox, influenza, the common cold, measles, infantile paralysis and encephalitis, or "sleeping sickness."

When a person is attacked by any of the filterable virus diseases his body cells are invaded by "inclusion bodies," objects whose nature always has been a mystery. Whether they represent he actual virus, or simply a result of its action on the body cells of the victim, physicians have been unable to determine.

Dr. Pinkerton, however, believes he has found new evidence regarding the nature of the inclusion bodies. He says his studies "favor the view that many of the so-called inclusion bodies may be compact clusters or colonies of very minute organisms."

Good Driver SAVED $13.70 on Automobile Insurance

Drives Packard car. Lives in Washington. Carries standard auto insurance. Saved $13.70 on 1933 insurance because he dealt direct with Liberty Mutual—"the company which will not insure dangerous drivers".

Bad Driver PAYS $13.70 more for Car Insurance

Carries standard auto insurance—same as the gentleman on the left. But he has to pay more for his car insurance because he is a dangerous driver and cannot buy insurance from Liberty Mutual.

YOU COULD HAVE SAVED up to $13.70 ... if you are a "good" driver

Two factors determine the cost and quality of your car insurance. First, the amount of losses which your automobile insurance company pays for accidents caused by policyholders. Second, the amount your insurance company pays to sell and handle policies.

You could have saved up to $13.70 of the yearly cost of your car insurance and received protection from one of the strongest insurance companies in America by dealing direct with Liberty.

Why pay a big sales commission year after year for placing your insurance when you can save time, trouble and money and get strong, sound protection by dealing direct with Liberty?

Why continue to pay for a lot of costly accidents, when you may place your insurance direct with Liberty—"the company which will not insure dangerous drivers".

Hundreds of responsible car-owners in Washington save from $9.80 to $13.70 yearly on car insurance because Liberty has fewer claims to pay and because it sells direct.

In the ordinary company this wouldn't reduce the cost of your car insurance but Liberty is a strictly mutual company. The savings we make belong to our policyholders. After strengthening resources and surplus funds for the protection of policyholders, Liberty pays cash dividends to policyholders which reduce the cost of their insurance.

These dividends have amounted to at least 20%—one-fifth—of every premium paid by every policyholder every year for 22 years. Over $37,900,000 has been saved for policyholders, since organization of the company in 1912.

And, the same factors which have resulted in these large savings—direct selling and selection of policyholders—make Liberty one of the strongest insurance companies in the world. Resources and surplus have increased during each of the depression years. This means that Liberty provides unquestionable financial protection and will settle your accident losses promptly and fairly.

If you are a responsible, careful-driving car-owner, 'phone National 7347 or visit our office in the Denrike Bldg. Or mail the coupon below for the cost of insuring your car and an estimate of the saving you would have made by dealing direct with Liberty Mutual—the company which will not insure DANGEROUS DRIVERS.

CONSIDER THESE SAVINGS made by car-owners last year on complete Personal Injury, Property Damage and Fire and Theft Insurance. These savings were made on new cars—old cars slightly less. Send coupon for exact quotation.
